Honesty vs. Cribbing: Girls' High in Dither

By YOLANDE GWIN.

Girls' High school has become honesty conscious.
Student government members in an effort to emphasize the importance of honesty in small matters are sponsoring a two-week honesty campaign featuring assemblies, bulletin boards, skits, slogans, questionnaires and discussions.

In a special homeroom period
Monday lieutenants in the drive distributed to every girl questionnaires which approached the question from many angles. The best answers submitted by the girls were used as "official answers." The questions and answers follow:

What is your definition of honesty?

"Honesty is the act of striving at all times to be true to oneself and to one's fellow men and by thus striving to instill in one's heart unfalsifiable ideals of character which will cause one to live an unselfish, happy, upright life."

What are some of the advantages to an individual of being honest?

"By being honest, an individual may acquire and hold many more friends than she would otherwise.
An individual may also climb in the business world as well as socially by being honest. The person will be trusted by his or her fel-lowmen."

Why are girls sometimes dishonest?

"Girls are sometimes dishonest because they think it will help them out of difficult situations.
Another reason is laziness in preparing one's lessons properly, and still another is the fact that they seem to think it is smart to do such things as chew gum in school and not be caught up with, or to sign from a study to go to one place and then actually go to another."

What do you think of a friend whom you see cheating on a test or hearing telling an untruth?

"She is cheating herself more than anyone else, because it will be a deep injury to her character."

What do you think of a girl who takes another's ring or pocketbook?

"She has lost far more than the girl from whom the articles were taken. She has lost one of her most prized possessions, her self-respect, and the other girl has merely lost an article of money value which may be more easily replaced."

There is a school in South Carolina in which there are 1,700 lockers. No lock is used in this school, yet no theft has been reported there within the last three years. Why is this honesty of a whole school worthwhile?

"Evidently the value of honesty has been taught the students at the Carolina school where there has been no theft for three years. A school of this kind has a high standard and a high name. If someone in the city in which the school is located wished an honest person for some reason or other, he would almost invariably call for a student in this school, feeling that almost anyone from that particular school would do. Its reputation and the reputation of its students have gone on before them."

How can dishonest practices be overcome, first by an individual girl and second by a school?

"A girl should develop her talents."

'Most Beautiful Girl' Receives Her Letter

KANSAS CITY, March 7.—(P)— That old tradition "the mail must go through" has been preserved, but the task of delivering a letter to "the most beautiful girl in Kansas City, 4736 Summit street" gave one postman some mighty bad moments.

The address is that of an apartment house. The postman did some tactful investigating, knocked at the door of Mrs. Louis Rice and asked to see her sister, Virginia Lee Barker.

Perusal of the letter disclosed it had been delivered to the right party.

Catherine Woodward, Girls' High senior, with her pencil, gives the definition of honesty.

Robber Has the Cash Delivered on Platter

A nicely dressed white man, apparently about 24 years old, used a Ponce de Leon avenue hotel last night as the scene of a well-planned holdup which netted him $10.

Using the house telephone, he ordered two cans of beer from a near-by store and change for $10.
Then he stood in the hallway and waylaid the delivery boy.

A bit later he did it all over again for $5, using a private residence address.

Autoist Splashes Slush To See Pedestrians Jump

RICHMOND, Ind., March 7.—(P)— Aquatic sports on a downtown street proved costly in court to Marshall Taylor, 37.

Deputy Prosecutor Floyd Gardner said Taylor had been driving near a sidewalk, splashing slush on pedestrians to see them jump.
"A man like you," Judge B. A.
Ball told the defendant, "ought not to be allowed to drive."

He fined Taylor $1 for driving without a license and $5 for speeding.

divorced him today so that he might marry Carole Lombard.

Mrs. Maria (Rhea) Gable was granted the decree after she tesdeserted her in the fall of 1935 and never came back.

In Hollywood Gable shied from comment, but Miss Lombard confirmed rumors of long standing that she will become Mrs. Clark Gable the third.

"We have made no plans," she

FRANCO WITHHOLDS TROOPS NEAR CITY

Planes and Artillery Used To Break Counter-coup of Extremist Units

MADRID, March 8.—(Wednesday)—(P)—Machine gun and rifle fire flashed and crackled in the darkness of Madrid's streets early today as Communists fought against the new Republican regime of General Jose Miaja and his peace program.

MADRID, Wednesday, March 8.
(UP)—The new Loyalist regime of General Jose Miaja announced at midnight that bombing planes, artillery and troops had broken the backbone of a Communist counter-revolt in the streets of Madrid after day-long fighting.

The Communist uprising followed leftist accusations that the 48-hour-old Republican defense council under Miaja, which is pledged to an early "peace with honor," was "supporting" Generalissimo Francisco Franco's Insurgents.

Miaja's regime said the Communists were trying to establish "terroristic despotism" and called out loyal troops to battle the entrenched extremists in the streets and around the government ministries.

Planes Bomb Reds.

On the northern outskirts, where the fighting was most bitter, the government announced the Loyalist planes had bombed "Communistic soldiers."

Groups of rebellious troops of the Madrid garrisons joined the Communist leaders.

Artillery fire and the clatter of machine guns resounded through the streets, cleared by government orders of civilians when the first shots were fired at troops from speeding automobiles in the morning.

Troops poured into the city, including crack anarchist shock troops eager for an opportunity to fight the Communists who long had been at odds with them.

The central squares, including the famous Puerta del Sol which is Madrid's "Times Square," became battlegrounds.

The counter-revolutionaries held positions around several of the government buildings.

The national defense council, set up 48 hours after the government of Premier Juan Negrin was overthrown in a swift coup d'etat, claimed that loyal troops held the

CIO LABOR PEACE PLAN IS QUICKLY REJECTED BY AFL

Negotiators Assert Proposal for Unity Was Designed for 'Headline Purposes' by Lewis.

TOBIN CONSENTS TO JOIN CONFEREES

President Asks for Permanent Solution to Split in the Unions.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—
(UP)—A bold plan by the Congress of Industrial Organization to restore labor peace by welding all union groups into a new "American Congress of Labor," was rejected tonight by American Federation of Labor negotiators who branded it "fanciful" and designed for "headline purposes."

The CIO proposal was submitted as peace emissaries of the two factions met at the White House with President Roosevelt to explore formulas for ending their three-year struggle for supremacy.

It proposed to embrace the powerful railroad brotherhoods, which have stood aloof from the AFL-CIO fight; would deny CIO President John L. Lewis or AFL President William Green offices in the proposed new organization, and recommended the retirement of Morrison at their present salary.

AFL Statement.

"We are convinced that the plan was not even designed for serious consideration," the AFL negotiators said. "Anyone familiar with present day labor difficulties will realize that the proposal does not offer any possible solution to the problems facing us."

"It should be obvious that the only way to obtain peace is for both sides to get down to consideration of the facts in a realistic way and then negotiate a settlement. Nothing can be accomplished by the issuance of fanciful statements for headline purposes."

A statement by the group said that in the hope of finding a "peaceful solution of the problems involved, we intend to confine ourselves to the procedure outlined by the President." They "regretted exceedingly" that the CIO committee saw fit to "place the President in an embarrassing position by using the White House as a sounding board for its proposal."

The AFL officials released the statement after conferring by telephone with Green, who is at his home in Coshocton, Ohio. Lewis refused comment.

The two groups will resume conferences at the Labor Department at 10 a. m. tomorrow, and will be joined by Daniel J. Tobin, a scheme for the relief of yellow fever—thus making possible the building of the Panama canal—delegates to the tenth annual Southeastern Surgical Congress were reminded here last night.

Speaking at the annual banquet of the organization, which concludes a three-day meeting today, Dr. T. C. Davidson, of Atlanta, retiring president, listed the many and brilliant accomplishments of southerners in the field of surgery.

"A southerner was the first to operate for cleft palate, the first to operate for club foot and the first to amputate at the hip successfully," said Dr. Davidson, as he literally called the roll of honor of southern physicians, some still living, who have made outstanding scientific contributions.

Calling them "bridge builders, who built so that others could fol-

Rivers' Son Is Married To Mariettan

Couple Leaves for Washington After Quiet Wedding Ceremony Here.

E. D. Rivers Jr., son of the Governor and Mrs. Rivers, and Miss Rubye Irene Ellison, of Marietta, were married at a quiet ceremony last night by the Rev. Ferguson L.
Wood, pastor of the Westminster Presbyterian church. The ceremony took place at St. Mark Methodist church.

James Lawton, of Lakeland, served as best man, while Miss Bernice Clark, of Atlanta, was maid of honor.

Governor Rivers was among the dozen witnesses to the ceremony.
Mrs. Rivers planned to attend but was called to Lakeland yesterday afternoon by the sudden death of an old friend of the Rivers family, Sam I. Watson, who perished in an explosion and fire.

The bride is a graduate of the Marietta High school, and for the last several years has been a member of the office force of the State Department of Public Welfare. She is a daughter of Mrs.
J. H. Hoover, of Orlando, Fla., formerly of Marietta.

Young Rivers is a graduate of the Lakeland High school and formerly attended Young Harris College. He is a practicing attorney.

Mr. and Mrs. Rivers left immediately after the ceremony for Washington, where Rivers will be connected with national headquarters of the Young Democratic Clubs of America in charge of plans for the organization's biennial convention which is scheduled for Pittsburgh early this summer.

In addition to the Governor, the guests at the ceremony were limited to intimate friends of the bride and groom.

CHARLES CITY, Iowa, March

BUCKET BRIGADE CONQUERS FIRE

Lakeland Blast Occurs While Chemically Treating Corn for Weevil

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

LAKELAND, Ga., March 7.
Trapped by an explosion and flames which spread quickly through a barn on his plantation near here, Sam I. Watson, member of the Georgia Board of Education, perished early this afternoon with two farm tenants.

The other victims were J. L.
Parrish and Edmond Jones.
Riley Stone, another tenant on the Watson farm, six miles from here, was standing near a door and fled to safety, prevented by the roaring flames from attempting to rescue the others.

Bodies of the three victims, huddled in one of the sheds which surrounded the big structure, were found after the flames had been extinguished by a bucket brigade.

Lint Miller's Brother-in-Law

Watson, a brother-in-law of Lint Miller, chairman of the State Highway Board, was directing the treatment of corn for weevil infestation when the explosion occurred, Stone said. The four men had treated several thousand bushels with a chemical preparation, and were leaving the barn when the blast came, apparently set off by a spark made by a nail as the door was opened.

Neighbors reported the explosion was heard a few minutes after 2 o'clock, and that the barn was enveloped in flames almost immediately. Volunteer fire fighters rushed to the scene and formed a bucket brigade to prevent further spread of the flames and to avert threatened cremation of the three trapped men.

Well-Known Farm.

The main section of the barn was 100 feet long and 60 feet wide, with small sheds on all sides. Contents of the structure included several head of livestock and between 4,000 and 5,000 bushels of corn.

Watson's farm, which includes more than 2,000 acres, is one of the best known in south Georgia, largely because of the progressive farming methods the owner had inaugurated and followed in its development.

Mr. Watson was the second member of the present State Board of Education to meet violent death within the last year.

Victorious Gandhi Ends Fast

Nauseated and Weakened Leader of Millions Wins Major Victory in Battle for Reforms.

RAJKOT, India, March 7.—(AP) Mohandas K. Gandhi ended with some orange juice today a "fast unto death" by which he won a major political victory in his battle for democracy in India.

The small, thin, bald 69-year-old leader of millions of Indians had started the demonstration 98 hours and 25 minutes earlier after drinking goat's milk. During the fast, his sixth for popular reforms, he had lost two pounds in weight, his blood pressure increased alarmingly and he became so weak that any attempt to sit up caused nausea and giddiness.

Victory Intervenes.
But he achieved his aim when the British viceroy of India, the Marquess of Linlithgow, intervened to settle Gandhi's dispute about establishing an advisory council on democratic reforms with the ruler of Rajkot state, the 29-year-old Thakore Saheb Shri Dharmendrasinhji.

There had been hurried consultations between the viceroy and many Indian political leaders, hundreds of sympathetic telegrams coming from all parts of the world, periods of mourning were declared throughout India, business was halted, Bombay markets were closed and a thousand peasants prayed outside his quarters.

Averts Crisis.
Lord Linlithgow was understood to have urged the ruler of Rajkot to yield to Gandhi's demands in order to avert a major political crisis at a critical stage in the development of a vast British scheme for an All-India Federation.

Weakened but triumphant, Gandhi immediately accepted the viceroy's invitation to go to New Delhi for personal discussions of the proposed reforms, based on the establishment of a council to suggest ways of introducing a democratic government.

MATADORS, PAWING BULLS WILL FIGHT IN HAPEVILLE

By CARY WILMER.

Viva El Torero!
At long last the Hapeville city council has relented and voted to give official sanction to genuine, Grade A, all-wool-and-a-yard-wide bull fights.

And by bull fights is meant bull fights, with no holds barred. No flower-smelling bulls like Ferdinand, but lusty, snorting, bellowing, and earth-pawing bulls.

It all started when Senor C. McNeill Leach, Hapeville attorney and also the Hapeville city alcade, applied to council on behalf of his friend, Alfredo Martinez, of Monterrey, Mexico, for permission to stage a Hapeville version of the popular Mexican pastime.

Council put its collective foot down on the idea—which left Senor Leach in a highly delicate situation. As city alcade and attorney for Senor Martinez he was forced to accept the verdict—else be placed in the position of acting as judge and defense counsel all at the same time.

She No Go.
In view of this dilemma—which would have been virtual without precedent in legal annals—Senor Leach reluctantly informed his client that the Hapeville ban on bull fights could not be lifted.

This, however, proved not to be the case, and last night council changed its mind. So what? Within the next few days Senor Leach leaves for old Monterrey and a conference with Senor Martinez.

MARTIN'S FACTION SET UP AS UNION
Independent Organization Established, With Future Allegiance Up to Vote.

DETROIT, March 7.—(AP)—Homer Martin's faction of the United Automobile Workers, formally established as a union independent of the AFL or CIO, entered a night convention session tonight to complete its organization with election of officers.

Martin, who called the convention in defiance of a UAW executive board majority which moved to impeach him as president, was elected without opposition as president of the independent union.

By resolution today the delegates abandoned the last claim to any connection with the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

They voted unanimously to submit any future question of affiliation "with any congress or federation of unions" to the rank and file membership of the union.

This left open the door to possible affiliation with the American Federation of Labor or a combination with the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, which withdrew last year from the

BROTHERHOOD HERE ASKS LABOR PEACE

Railroad Union Local Requests Leaders To Subordinate Personalities.

A plea to John L. Lewis and William Green to "subordinate personalities" and do everything in their power to bring peace to the warring AFL and CIO unions was voiced yesterday by the Georgia Lodge, No. 866, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, F. F. Farris, secretary, announced.

The brotherhood appealed earnestly to the leaders of the two organizations to "comply with the request of President Roosevelt" for the benefit of labor and industry as well.

Following is the text of a letter the Georgia trainmen dispatched to Green and Lewis: William Green, President, American Federation of Labor, Washington, D. C.

Dear Sirs: The undersigned committee was instructed by the above lodge in regular meeting, February 26, 1939, to urge each of you to do everything within your power to comply with the request of President Roosevelt for the benefit of labor and industry as well.

To all these troubles of the trainmen, the President of the United States pointed out obvious facts for your consideration. It is with pleasure that we note Mr. Green has complied to the extent of appointing his committee.

Roosevelt, and for 100 years he has been fighting against the tyranny of gold, Liberty Leagues, chambers of commerce, renegade deserters from his own ranks, and greatest of all, a hostile press dominated by advertisers.

ATLANTANS NAMED TO ARMY RESERVE
Another Is Promoted to First Lieutenant.

One Atlantian has been promoted and two appointed to positions in the Organized Reserve, fourth corps area headquarters announced yesterday.

Julian Clarence Heriot, of 1761 Meadowdale avenue, N. E., and Howard Lindsay McKinley, of 1106 McLynn avenue, N. E., were both made second lieutenants in the quartermaster corps reserve, and Rodney Harford Peck, of 1078 Arlington avenue, S. W., was promoted to first lieutenant in the infantry reserve.

Corps area headquarters also reported the appointment of John H. T. McPherson Jr., of Athens, to a second lieutenant in the cavalry reserve.

of Quitman, vice chairman of the board, was shot and killed by a deranged member of his family. Mrs. Branch also was slain.

In Atlanta, Governor Rivers expressed deep sorrow over the death of Mr. Watson, who was an old personal friend.

"The death of Mr. Watson and his two friends is a great shock to me," the Governor said. "I have had few friends closer to me than Mr. Watson. In addition, he was an excellent public servant and an outstanding member of the board of education. The school children of the state and the state itself have lost a fine public official, and I have lost a warm friend. I am deeply grieved."

Miss Levand Watson, an employee of the State Department of Public Welfare, is a daughter of Mr. Watson. Mrs. Rivers informed her of the tragedy and she left for home immediately, accompanied by Mrs. Rivers.

Chairman Miller, of the highway board, will leave Atlanta tomorrow morning to attend the Watson funeral.

WHITNEY BALKS AT 'ONE BIG UNION'
CLEVELAND, March 7.—(AP)—Alexander F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, commented today on John L. Lewis' proposal for one huge union of the CIO, AFL and railroad brotherhoods: "I don't like that term, one big union."

Whitney said, however, "if the groups want to set up a co-operative program I think I could go along with that. I would have to get convention authority before I could take any action on a bi-union proposal."

Whitney added that "a federation of organized labor, or something of that sort I think would appeal to the average person. We'll co-operate with one or all of the groups any time for the benefit of society or labor."

David B. Robertson, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers, and Alvaney Johnson, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, said they had no comment until they heard from Lewis and William Green, president of the AFL.

George M. Harrison, president of the Railway Labor Executives' Association at Cincinnati, also declined comment.

Brotherhood sources said that 15 of the 21 railroad organizations already were affiliated with the AFL. Only three, the conductors, the firemen and the engineers, have no connection. Part of the membership of the other three was under the jurisdiction of some AFL affiliate.

Labor Leaders Attending White House Conference

These labor leaders were told yesterday by President Roosevelt that the rank and file in their organizations desire peace and that they should be able to negotiate such a settlement. Leaving the White House are, left to right, Philip Murray, CIO; Sidney Hillman, CIO; Mathew Woll, AFL; Thomas A. Rickert (back) AFL; Secretary of Labor Perkins, Harry C. Bates, AFL, and John L. Lewis, CIO.

AFL Vice President Harry C. Bates was named chairman of the federation's negotiating committee, which also includes Vice Presidents Matthew Woll and Thomas A. Rickert.

Lewis spoke for the CIO committee, which includes Vice Presidents Sidney Hillman and Philip Murray.

Roosevelt Appeal.
In appealing to these six men to make peace, Mr. Roosevelt said that "this is one of the most important domestic problems in American life today and I feel sure that all of you will enter into this service with a patriotic sense that you are serving the welfare of your country, as well as the welfare of your organizations by laying aside the prejudices and bitterness, and by finding the solution which will bring a permanent and acceptable peace and unity in the labor movement."

"I have faith in your capacity as individuals and the organizations that you represent to make a practical adjustment both of the theory and the realities of a conflict which has already lasted too long and which is weakening the public standing of organized labor in this country," Mr. Roosevelt continued.

"It is important that you enter these negotiations with open minds and with a determination to explore every aspect of the problem together."

"The fact that there have been disagreements on particular points in the past should merely mean that all points must be studied and explored. It is desirable that this should be a negotiated peace made by this committee, using your own ingenuity and resourcefulness to find various ways of settling knotty problems."

"While there has been extreme bitterness and conflict in certain localities, there are many cities and towns now where the local CIO and AFL are working together in closest harmony. I am told that there are some places where the CIO and AFL use the same union hall. The two factions, as they are called, are not really factions. They realize that their interests are the same."

The President said that he was "advised, on the basis of reports coming from the rank and file of organized labor, that at least 90 per cent of the actual membership of both factions desire peace."

Everything from Soup to Nuts
The stomach should digest two pounds of food a day. When you eat too much, or eat rich foods or when you are nervous, hurried or in a hurry, your stomach cannot do its work. Your food doesn't digest and you have gas, heartburn, nausea, pain, or other stomach troubles. You feel sour, sick and upset all over. You are tired and have no energy. It is dangerous and foolish. It takes three little black tablets called Doan's for Indigestion to make the stomach digest food properly. Doan's is the only tablet that is so quick to act and so sure. ## STEEL PRICE SETUP CALLED FOE OF U. S.

Methods Endanger Democracy, Trade Commission Tells Monopoly Probe.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—(AP) The Federal Trade Commission proposed today that the steel industry's price methods be outlawed, asserting they were endangering capitalism and democracy and contributing to economic depression.

The commission presented its recommendations to the monopoly investigating committee in a formal statement analyzing the industry's basing point system.

"The steel industry is a focal center of a monopolistic infection which, if not eradicated, may well cause the death of free capitalism in the United States," the commission said.

"The fact that sound conditions can be restored only with considerable trouble and expense is not a sufficient reason for doing nothing, nor for adopting irritating but ineffective half measures. The capitalism system of free initiative is not immortal, but is capable of dying and of dragging down with it the system of democratic government."

"Monopoly constitutes the death of capitalism and the genesis of authoritarian government." The commission named as the underlying objection to the basing point system the uniformity of delivered prices which it produces.

AMERICAN PEOPLE BLESSED BY POPE

Holy Father Gives Audience to Cardinals O'Connell and Mundelein.

VATICAN CITY, March 7.—(AP) A benediction on the people of the United States was given today by Pope Pius XII as he received in audience William Cardinal O'Connell and George Cardinal Mundelein, archbishops of Boston and Chicago.

The blessing, which the holy father said was imparted particularly to the people of Boston and Chicago, was given in two special half-hour audiences with two of the American cardinals who participated in the election of the new Pontiff March 2.

Cardinals O'Connell and Mundelein were received separately in the papal chambers on the second floor of the pontifical palace. The Pope expressed pleasure that as Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, papal secretary of state, he had been able to visit the United States before his pontificate.

He recalled the hospitality he had received in October and November, 1932, when he made a quick aerial tour to the Pacific coast and back before meeting President Roosevelt at Hyde Park, N. Y.

One of the Pope's first duties will be to choose a successor to late Cardinal Hayes, archbishop of New York.

Colonel in Cancer Fight

MRS. D. D. McMASTERS JOINS CANCER WAR

Named Colonel for DeKalb County Drive.

Mrs. D. D. McMasters has accepted appointment as colonel for DeKalb county in the Women's Field Army Campaign for Control of Cancer.

In accepting the appointment, she announced the following as members of the DeKalb county executive committee in the cancer control campaign:

Mrs. C. S. Smith, chairman of the DeKalb health committee; Dr. Willis T. McCurdy, president of the DeKalb Medical Association; Dr. J. D. Evans, head of the health department of DeKalb county; Dr. J. E. Scarborough, head of the Emory hospital cancer clinic; and R. S. Huggins, superintendent of Emory University hospital. Mrs. Clay Penick is chairman of the speakers' bureau and Mrs. Mary Ellen Bennett is chairman of memorial gifts committee.

The membership drive for the Women's Field Army to obtain funds to fight cancer with knowledge will be conducted during the second week in April.

REPUBLICANS BACK BYRD REFORM BILL

Straight Party Issue Arises; Cox Supports Administration Plan.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—(AP) An apparently clear cut party issue was drawn today in the house between Democrats supporting the revised government reorganization bill and Republicans backing a substitute written by a Democratic senator.

Early in the day's debate, the revised bill received the support of two Democrats, Cox, of Georgia, and Ford, of Mississippi, who opposed the legislation in its original form last year.

Cox told the house that in revising the bill, the committee had taken into account the objections raised last year and had produced a measure that "expresses the will of the house."

"I occupy the same ground," he said, "if there has been any part. This bill does not in effect undertake to delegate any kind of legislative power to the President of the United States. The President is merely charged with investigating facts and then applying a remedy which congress seeks to lay down in the bill."

At issue was the question of how much authority congress should retain to nullify shifts and regroupings of governmental agencies which the legislation authorized the President to make.

The bill before the house, reported by its special committee on reorganization, proposes that such changes should become permanent unless congress takes contrary action within sixty days after their announcement.

The substitute, presented by Senator Byrd, Democrat, Virginia, from the senate committee on reorganization, provides that the changes would become effective only if specifically approved by both branches of congress within twenty days.

D.A.R. 'Liberals' Invited To Quit, Join New Group

BOSTON, March 7.—(AP)—Appealing to "people who feel the Daughters of the American Revolution have been too hidebound and reactionary," two Boston clubwomen today invited D. A. R. members to join a "more liberal" group, "the Descendants of the American Revolution."

The call, addressed also to members of the Sons of the American Revolution, came little more than a week after Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt protested the D. A. R.'s denial of its Washington Hall to Marian Anderson, negro contralto. Mrs. J. A. De Haas, of Belmont, wife of a Harvard business school professor, and Mrs. Walter E. Dewey, Boston clubwoman, joined in announcing a meeting here March 16 to organize a Boston Chapter of the Descendants. They said Margaret Hatfield, former wife of Stuart Chase, author and economist, would speak as the national chairman of the Descendants, whose headquarters are in New York.

HOME RAZED BY FIRE. OXFORD, Ga., March 7.—Fire of an unknown origin last night destroyed the residence here of Mrs. G. W. Coffield, superintendent of the Brenau College Infirmary. The house was occupied by Mrs. J. C. Calvert. Most of the furnishings were saved.

Dream Kitchen Saves Miles of Steps

Time in Preparing Meal Often Can Be Cut in Half by Changes—See House of Progress One.

By PRESS HUDDLESTON. Obsolete equipment and inefficient arrangement literally force millions of home-makers to tramp exhausting miles to and fro across their kitchens, day in and day out. These women wonder why simple tasks become too much for them.

Surveys show that the distance the home-maker must travel in these outmoded, "happen-so" kitchens to get a single meal can be cut in half by reorganizing the kitchen's arrangement and its equipment. Atlanta women can see that this is true by comparing the all-electric kitchen in the model home, erected on the city auditorium stage, at the "House of Progress Exposition," with their own kitchen. The exposition opens next Monday. This kitchen was planned by the kitchen-planning engineer of the Georgia Power Company.

This company offers its customers a complete kitchen planning service without obligation. Today's modern, planned kitchen uses electrical equipment for efficiency. This equipment is arranged in the order in which it is used in the preparation of a meal. Such an orderly arrangement saves time, effort and nerve strain, while the day's routine duties move smoothly and easily along.

Plenty of cabinets are provided for storage. Convenient work counters between an efficient electric refrigerator and the sink, and joining the sink area to a cool, clean electric range, are comfortable working height, well lighted, and complete with convenience outlets for the ready use of the smaller electric kitchen helpers.

To prepare dinner, food supplies from refrigerator cabinets are handled on the nearest counter with no steps wasted. The running water is within arm's reach, and so is the range when all is ready. The cooking is done within a few steps of the dining room so that serving, too, is simplified.

After dinner, the electric dishwasher, supplied with piping hot water heated electrically, dispenses with the irksome washing of dishes by hand. With calm nerves, a brisk step, and the glow of health in her smile, mother is ready for a happy evening with the family.

Go through this model home, note its beautiful furnishings and its convenient all-electric kitchen. The home is to be sold to the highest bidder under sealed bids.

COLLEGE PARK ASKS BIG CIVIC CENTER

Would Put School, Stadium and Library on Cox College Tract.

Development of the 28-acre tract owned by Cox College, College Park, as a civic center with a new high school, stadium, library and other facilities was proposed yesterday at a meeting of the Fulton county board of education. A delegation of leading College Park citizens, headed by Mayor George Harris and Hugh Couch, chairman of a newly established planning commission, that the county school system with co-operate as far as possible with Fulton county commissioners and the city of College Park.

Although no price was quoted on the tract, which lies on Main street near the central business center, it was said that an appraisal by a distinguished group probably would facilitate consummation of the plans by arriving at a reasonable purchase price.

Jere A. Wells, county school superintendent, said the old building should be razed.

Harris and Couch, backed by Fred Shaefer, College Park councilman; William Palmer, A. C. Brown and former Commissioner George Longino, urged the county board to co-operate, outlining plans for the development of the tract.

Board members suggested that an attempt be made to arrive at a price for the properties and that commissioners and College Park itself decide just what could be done in the way of a co-operative acquisition and development of the holdings.

Amos 'n' Andy to Go On CBS After 11 Yrs

NEW YORK, March 7.—(AP) The Columbia Broadcasting Company announced tonight that the comic team of Amos 'n' Andy, beginning April 3 will be heard over a CBS hook-up of 55 stations after 11 years with the National Broadcasting Company and 48 affiliated stations.

Equipped by the Georgia Power Company, the all-electric kitchen in the model home to be shown at the "House of Progress Exposition" is the last word in kitchen efficiency and beauty. It conveniently groups the equipment and storage cabinets in a U-shape, so everything is at the homemaker's fingertips. The refrigerator and preparation counter are at the right. The range and serving counter are at the left. Joining them underneath the window is the combination sink and electric dishwasher. Underneath and above the work counters are handy storage cabinets.

PATENT MEDICINE IS SEIZED BY U. S.

Accusation Against Bromo-Seltzer Alleges Danger to Health.

By The Associated Press. Assistant United States District Attorney Isadore Left announced yesterday federal agents had seized more than 2,300 bottles of Bromo-Seltzer, a proprietary medicine, on charges it was mislabeled and potentially "dangerous to health."

The formal petition of accusation, filed under the federal food, drug and cosmetics act of 1938, alleged the widely used medicine was "misbranded" and "is dangerous to health when used in the dosage or with the frequency prescribed" on the containers.

The Emerson Drug Company of Baltimore, makers of the remedy which is used largely for headaches and neuralgia, was given until April 1 to file an answer to the charges against the product.

If such an answer is filed a trial date then would be set by Federal Judge Marvin Underwood, who authorized yesterday's seizure. Left explained that if the government proved its accusation in a jury trial, the destruction of the medicine then could be ordered. If the accusation were not sustained the product would be returned to its owner.

He emphasized that no criminal accusations were involved. J. M. McManus, chief of the Atlanta office of the Food and Drug Administration, said he "believed" similar actions were planned or had been taken elsewhere and that the accusations could be extended to apply to all of the remedy now manufactured, rather than to any specific batch.

Yesterday's seizures were made at a wholesale druggist's warehouse and stocks of retailers were not immediately affected.

NAVY TO INSPECT BATTALION HERE

Atlanta Unit Rated Second Best in U. S.

A navy inspection board from the Bureau of Navigation will inspect the United States naval reserve battalion here tomorrow night to determine its efficiency and standing.

The Atlanta battalion, under Lieutenant Commander Harry F. Dobbs, U. S. N. R., was stood at the top of the 143 reserve units in the country for the last 10 years. Now rated second in efficiency, the battalion stood first for four consecutive years, and second for three years.

The board will review the battalion, composed of two divisions under Lieutenants W. B. Tucker and George Griffin at 7:30 o'clock. The divisions will go through battle problems, emergency drills, navigation and steamship drills.

Captain Herbert B. Riebe, of the Bureau of Navigation, ordnance, is chairman of the board, with Commander Walter L. Taylor, a Georgian, and Lieutenant Commander J. P. Conover Jr. as the other members.

What This City Council Needs Is-- 'Better Oratory,' Opines Alderman

Silver-Tongued Ed Gilliam Even Goes So Far as To Consider Offering Trophy for Best Speech and Letting Press Sit in Judge's Stand.

By LUKE GREEN.

A ringing challenge for more and better oratory in city council was sounded yesterday by Alderman Ed A. Gilliam, of the second ward.

The alderman was sitting in the press room of the city hall. His gaze traveled out the window, across the court and into the council chamber. He seemed to have a mental picture of Demosthenes by the sea, of Patrick Henry pleading, "Give me liberty or give me death," of Henry Grady upholding the cause of "The New South."

"Why don't we start a movement for more and better speeches in our council meetings?" he said without shifting his gaze.

Press as Judge.

There was a shuffle among three reporters who had been listening with a somewhat passive interest. They looked at the alderman in the top of the 143 reserve units in the country for the last 10 years. They settled back in their chairs. The alderman continued his discourse.

"I think we should give a cup this year to the councilman making the best speech on the floor of council. After all, there should be some incentive to good oratory in that august body. Why, we could even let the press be the judges."

There was another shuffle among the reporters—more marked than before.

"Please, Mr. Alderman, after all . . . If we were charged with such a responsibility, we would be certain to award the trophy to the one making the shortest speech." But the alderman was serious. He went so far as to say he might buy the trophy. Apparently he was disgruntled over an argument in which he had engaged with Councilman J. Allen Couch the day before in council meeting. The two had spent approximately 20 minutes in trying to decide whether the Henry Grady monument was situated in the middle of Marietta street. However, it should be explained that a point on angle parking was involved.

Silver-Tongued Orator.

But, indeed, the alderman is a great admirer of the fine art of speech-making. He is quite a master of the English language and frequently startles council with his big words and flowery phrases. He and Councilman Couch and Councilman John A. White probably are the recognized orators of council.

But as to a trophy for the councilman making the best speech, Couch shook his head.

"I don't think much of the idea," he said. "The people will improve our oratory at the next election if we aren't doing it right."

Stealing a line from Patrick Henry, Councilman White asserted:

"I care not what others may do, but as for me, give me public improvements instead of salary raises."

PATRIOTISM FREES

1917 BOMB MAKER

American of German Descent Tells Court Nazis 'No Good for Me.'

CHICAGO, March 7.—(AP)—An old man who once expressed his hatred of America with 12-inch bombs today avowed his life for the country in words of penance and patriotism.

The man who underwent this metamorphosis was Reinhold Faust, 74, white haired, haggard.

He came to the felony court to face charges of storing explosives in a business district. He had confessed that, back in the tense days of the World War, he had fashioned seven bombs of foot-long lengths of pipe and gunpowder. He had related how one of them was placed in the Auditorium theater on November 17, 1917, when civic and society leaders attended an opera performance given for the benefit of patriotic projects.

"At that time I was fanatic enough to do it," he told Assistant State's Attorney Morris Meyers. "I still had a warm spot for my fatherland (Germany). But things have changed completely. I love my country (the United States) now."

"Prosecution of this man after 22 years have elapsed would be persecution," Meyers informed Judge Matthew Hartigan. "He has undergone a transformation. Time has granted a pardon."

"What," the jurist inquired, "do you think of the Nazis?"

"They are no good for me," responded Faust. The judge quashed the charges—Faust was free.

BUSINESS RESPONSE PLEASES PRESIDENT

Roosevelt Says Appeasement Progressing, Refuses Comment on Debt Limit.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—(UP)—President Roosevelt said that his new business appeasement policy is progressing nicely, and brushed aside as unimportant the possibility that the administration may ask congress to increase the public debt limit to $50,000,000,000.

He also told his press conference that published dispatches to the effect that he will renew his demand that congress appropriate an additional $150,000,000 to finance relief until July 1, were cock-eyed.

Mr. Roosevelt said he would confer tomorrow with Works Progress Administrator F. C. Harrington about the present status of relief funds and that probably next Monday he would send a message to congress outlining the current situation. The amount of money he will request, he said, will be determined by the report he gets from Harrington. It may be nothing, he said, and it may be $150,000,000.

He touched only briefly on taxes. Asked what his attitude was toward agitation by business for complete repeal of the undivided profits tax, in view of the apparent policy, he said he must withhold a reply until he can determine how much revenue has been derived from this levy. It was cut from a maximum of 27 1/2 per cent to 2 1/2 per cent in a tax revolt in the 75th congress.

The President said that before departing for the fleet maneuvers in the Caribbean, he was agreeable to repeal of taxes acting as a deterrent to business expansion and had sought to give assurance that business has nothing to fear from the New Deal in its tax, utility and other policies affecting private enterprise.

It had immediate repercussion in congress where a coalition of southern Democrats and Republicans boomed away with demands that federal spending be curbed and that the government economize at once.

CIVIL SERVICE POSITIONS OPEN FOR EXAMINATION

United States Civil Service Commission has announced open competitive examinations for five positions paying from $1,440 to $8,600 a year. Applications for one job must be in the office of the manager of the fifth civil service district in the New Post Office building by March 27, and for the other jobs by April 3.

The positions and annual salaries are as follows: junior multi-graph operator, $1,440; chief of occupational information and guidance service, $5,600; specialist, occupational information, $4,600; and specialist in occupations for girls and women, $3,800.

The December 15, 1933, cotton and coffee price index, although only 70 per cent of pre-war, was six points higher than on the same date in 1937.

Human Ear a Fine Job, Doctors Told

Expert on Hearing Addresses Congress Here; Science's Discovery of 'Second Brain' Related.

"God did a good job on the ear," Dr. Austin A. Hayden, director of the department of otolaryngology of St. Joseph hospital, Chicago, and director of the American Society for the Hard of Hearing, yesterday told a session of the three-day tenth annual Southeastern Surgical Congress at the Biltmore hotel.

Presenting a paper on "Hearing Aids; Old and New," Dr. Hayden said:

"Hearing is now being tested in terms of frequency; that is, pitch and intensity, or loudness. Hearing is not measured in fractions, as formerly. Today, it is measured analytically instead of quantitatively.

"Today, it is not how much you hear, but what kind of sounds you hear, for instance, the sound of an automobile horn or the high string of a violin.

"The center part of the hearing scale is the pivotal point of hearing, and this, fortunately, is where 90 per cent of conversational tones center. This is also the point which is most resistant to disease and deterioration.

"In other words, the most important part of the ear is the last to go. Hardly ever is it otherwise. While the entire human body is marvelously fashioned, the Creator did an excellent job on the human ear."

Numerous Hearing Aids.

Dr. Hayden's paper, tracing the progress of hearing aids since 1875, when Alexander Graham Bell created a simple carbon transmitter, also pointed out that since that time, there have been developed hearing aids of multiple component parts, since 1932.

"Instead of one receiver, there are nine. Instead of one bone oscillator, there are six. Instead of one amplifier, there are five," he said.

Dr. Hayden was one of several prominent medical men who presented papers yesterday as the congress, which has attracted nearly 500 physicians to the city, went into its second day.

On the program were Dr. W. H. Stewart, clinical professor of radiology, Columbia University; Dr. Grover C. Penberthy, professor of clinical surgery, Wayne University Medical School, Detroit; Dr. A. I. Folsom, professor of urology, Baylor University Medical College; Dr. George W. Crile, famed surgeon of Cleveland, Ohio; Dr. M. Y. Dabney, of Birmingham, editor of the Southern Medical Journal; Dr. Wayne Babcock, of Philadelphia, professor of surgery and clinical surgery, Temple University; Dr. Henry H. Kessler, of Newark, N. J.; Dr. J. L. McGeehe, of Memphis, Tenn., professor of surgery, College of Medicine, University of Tennessee; Dr. Charles S. Venable, of San Antonio, Texas; Dr. Hugh H. Trout, of Jefferson hospital, Roanoke, Va.; Dr. W. O. Johnson, associate professor of gynecology, University of Louisville Medical School; Dr. Elkin L. Rippey, instructor in surgery, Vanderbilt University, and Dr. Meredith F. Campbell, professor of urology, New York University College of Medicine.

Dr. Dabney told of recent experiments in the use of nicotinic acid in relieving pain caused by women's diseases, stating that in half of the cases treated there was improvement.

Dr. Babcock presented a lecture on latest developments in methods of drainage from interior organs.

"Through the use of new instruments and technique," he said, "the mortality rate following operations for intestinal cancer were lowered from 16 per cent to slightly more than five per cent."

Artificial Limbs.

Dr. Kessler presented a lecture and sound motion picture on use of artificial arms and other limbs, and general rehabilitation of persons crippled by accident or disease.

Dr. McGeehe presented a statistical study of immediate versus delayed treatment of acute appendicitis with rupture, and said:

"The lessened toll of death from appendicitis in recent years may be attributed in part to the widespread educational campaign conducted through the co-operation of public health officials, medical associations, insurance companies,

Doctors Take Breathing Spell From Weighty Lectures

They dined, instead of listening. Physicians attending the tenth annual Southeastern Surgical Congress took a breathing spell last night and banqueted in the ballroom of the Biltmore hotel. Sanders, of Memphis, incoming president of the congress.

school officials and civic organizations.

"The medical profession has tardily but surely contributed to this recent reduction. The skill and judgment of surgeons have reached higher levels, especially in the treatment of appendicitis, peritonitis. The types of anesthesia being used are resulting in a more favorable experience, and pre and post-operative care have been improved.

"Appendicitis in the United States is still responsible for more than 18,000 deaths—unnecessary deaths.

Dr. Stewart related what is being accomplished through use of moving X-ray pictures, and recent developments in the field of cine-fluorography.

Dr. Venable spoke on the use of vitallium, a new metal, used in treatment of fixations of fractures.

Among technical exhibits viewed by the physicians and surgeons were that of Dr. Addison G. Brenizer, of Charlotte, N. C., a display of photographs dealing with the use of fascia and ribbon catgut in the repair of hernia and cleft palate, resections of the gastrointestinal tract and means of facilitating them, and an additional method of ureteral transplantation.

Music Splendid Nerve Tonic, Doctor Asserts

Music hath charms to soothe the savage breast—and the tired physician.

This opinion was expressed here yesterday by Dr. J. L. McGeehe, of Memphis, professor of surgery at the University of Tennessee College of Medicine, who lectured before the tenth annual assembly of the Southeastern Surgical Congress.

Commenting on the fact that men of medicine are taking to music in large numbers, Dr. McGeehe said:

"It's a good idea. There is no doubt that music has a beneficial effect when one is tired and worn out. From personal experience, I know that often I am pepped up by hearing a lively tune.

Dr. McGeehe said he agreed with Dr. Julius Lowman, neuro-psychiatrist of Boston, Mass., that "doctors have a hobby to prevent their having a neurosis as well as their patients."

"It's all to the good that there's now many a hot trumpet hidden under the stethoscope in the medical kit," Dr. McGeehe summed up, in his interview.

'Portraits' of Corpuscles Painted By Atlantan Sent to World's Fair

Hortense Elton Garver Studied Blood Cells Under Microscope Before Making Drawings, Some of Which Are on Exhibit at Surgical Congress.

By ST. JOHN BARNWELL.

Blood corpuscles have had their "portraits painted" by an Atlanta woman and sent to the New York's World Fair.

Hortense Elton Garver (Mrs. Carl C. Garver), assistant in the department of pathology in the Emory University School of Medicine, did the paintings. She has studied blood cells under the microscope and made minute drawings of them in the 44 full page color plates for the book, "Diseases of Blood and Atlas of Hematology," written by Dr. Roy R. Kracke, professor of pathology, and Hortense Garver.

The book was published in 1937, and four of the drawings have proved their excellence by being selected for exhibition at the World's Fair. Enlarged to 18-inch circles, they have just been sent to New York.

The rest of the 40 original blood drawings are on exhibit this week at the Southeastern Surgical Congress. This scientific exhibition on the mezzanine is open to the public as a part of the Emory University display.

Much of the material for these drawings was obtained from the registry established at Emory in 1934, 1935 and 1936. Blood diseases from all over the world were recorded at Emory during that period; medical samples were sent to be scrutinized under the microscope by Dr. Kracke and Hortense Garver.

"When blood is studied under the microscope," explained Mrs. Garver, "aniline dyes are used to make the cellular structures visible and the blood cells react with a wide variety of brilliant color combinations. This method of study often facilitates the detection of certain abnormalities which may be illustrated with colored drawings."

The pictures were drawn with water-colored crayons. Carefully shaded with a "pink" water wash and a fine camel's hair brush and the delicate painted drawings were done. But the difficulty was in making the colors accurate. Here there could not be a poetic or artistic interpretation but candid camera version.

Dr. Kracke, who has been a member of the Atlanta branch of the National League of American Pen Women and a member of the Phi Sigma, honorary biological fraternity. After graduation from Agnes Scott college, she received her master of science degree in biology at Emory University in 1932, and entered the hematology department in research.

As one of the few women members of the Emory faculty, Mrs. Garver instructs laboratory technicians and medical students, continues her research, writing, and "blood portraits" in her laboratory-office in the Anatomy building, at Emory.

Less Than 4 Per Cent Mortality In 3,000,000 Operations a Year

Dr. Irvin Abell Contrasts Splendid Showing With 60 Per Cent Rate of Past Century in Kiwanis Club Address.

"Of the 3,000,000 operations yearly performed in the United States and Canada, the mortality rate is less than 4 per cent," Dr. Irvin Abell, of Louisville, Ky., president of the American Medical Association, said here yesterday.

Dr. Abell, in this city to attend the tenth annual assembly of the Southeastern Surgical Congress, addressed a luncheon meeting of the Kiwanis Club at the Ansley hotel.

Speaking on "Some Contributions by the Medical Profession to the Public," Dr. Abell emphasized that the doctor's responsibility has extended beyond the treatment of individual patients to the welfare of the community of which the patients are a part.

He stressed the doctor's duty in the prevention of disease and the preservation of health, and said:

"In the 16th century, life expectancy was only 20 years. At the beginning of this century, it was 33 years. At the present time, it is 63 years.

"This is due in large part to the control of typhoid, the elimination of great plagues and scourges, the lessening of communicable diseases, diphtheria control, maternal and child welfare, and the reduction of tuberculosis mortality.

"Even diabetics and persons with pernicious anemia are today able to continue in the community usefulness."

Pointing out the part surgery has played in the advance of medicine, Dr. Abell contrasted the 60 per cent mortality rate on operations in the past century to the present less than 4 per cent in the total of 3,000,000 operations yearly in this country and Canada.

Besides Dr. Abell, another distinguished lecturer in Atlanta for the Surgical Congress, Dr. W. Wayne Babcock, professor of surgery and clinical surgery, Temple University, Philadelphia, addressed the organization. His subject was "The Changing Surgical Practice," a review of progress in surgery down the years.

SALARY INCREASES BEFORE COMMITTEE

White Sees Refusal of Raises Today.

Salary raises for 132 city employees are expected to be killed by the finance committee this afternoon, Councilman John A. White said yesterday.

The increases were sent back to the committee after council had passed them and then held them up on a notice to reconsider. Only nine of the original 141 were approved by council.

"I am going to insist that all of these raises be killed and the money set up for public improvement," White said. The 132 raises amount to approximately $18,000, he said.

MEDICAL LEADERS FIGHT FUND SLICE

Paullin and Minchew Ask Full Appropriation for State Health Work.

Two former presidents of the Georgia Medical Association joined yesterday with the current head of the organization, Dr. Grady N. Coker, of Canton, in statements urging the general assembly not to cut the appropriation of the State Health Department.

"Georgia must not reduce its public health program; it cannot afford to do so," Dr. James E. Paullin, of Atlanta, declared.

Dr. Paullin said he had been a close observer of the Health Department for more than a quarter of a century, and had seen the favorable influence of its work on the health of the people of Georgia.

He added: "Preventive medicine is a most important part of our state's governmental activity, perhaps the most important of all except the education of our people. We have made great strides forward with every phase of human endeavor, but each step has been accomplished after the health needs were considered. An individual whose health is poor cannot be educated, nor can he contribute to the development of agriculture, industry or anything else. Georgia must not reduce its public health program; it cannot afford to do so."

Dr. B. H. Minchew, of Waycross, said industrial advancement has been retarded in Georgia because of health conditions "but if the legislature will appropriate the necessary funds for this important department, which is headed by one of the most efficient health officers in America—Dr. T. F. Abernethy—our state will soon benefit by great industrial development."

Dr. Coker said Monday: "Georgia cannot economize on the operation of its Health Department if our citizens make progress comparable with other states."

The Georgia Public Health Association, headed by Dr. C. S. Rutland, of LaGrange, issued a statement expressing "confidence in our present public health program and in the director of the State Health Department."

In the last week of his life, performed three major operations.

"Another great southern pioneer was Dr. Hunter Holmes McGuire. He was one of the first surgeons to accept germ theory. During the War Between the States, he served on the staff of General Stonewall Jackson and after the war he was professor of surgery at the Medical College in Virginia, at Richmond.

"He was one of the first to standardize surgical technique, and among the first users of Lister's carbolic spray.

"Another brilliant Virginian, Dr. Jesse Bennett, performed the first successful Caesarian section in the United States, January 14, 1794. He performed this operation on his own wife, who had been in labor three days.

"His wife had been called to operate, but declined. His wife lived 25 years after the operation, and the daughter born at the time lived to be 70 years old.

"Dr. Ephraim McDowell, a frontier country doctor, in 1809, at Danville, Va., removed a large ovarian tumor. Anesthesia and aseptic technique were yet unborn. But he dared to pioneer—and succeeded. In Danville today, there are monuments to him and to his brave patient, Mrs. James Todd Crawford."

"In Tennessee, there was Dr. Patrick Vance, the first physician to locate in the area which is now that state. During the Cherokee Indian campaign of 1776, he discovered a treatment for scalped persons. His method was to use an awl and bore holes in the dry, denuded skull, until blood came.

"These holes sprouted granulations which spread out and healed the head. Two years to heal—but he saved lives."

Dr. Davidson also recounted the accomplishments of men in South Carolina, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Georgia.

Westmoreland's Work.

"In our own state, there was Dr. Willis F. Westmoreland Jr., of this city, the first to apply antiseptic surgery in Georgia.

"There was Dr. L. A. Dugas, of Augusta, who first described his famous test for dislocated shoulder in 1856. He served in the Confederate army, and used war wounds as a preventive for hospital gangrene.

"And of course, there was Dr. Crawford W. Long, who, in 1842, was the first to perform an operation with sulphuric acid as an anesthetic. He was the first to use ether in 1845. He used it first on his own wife, in obstetrics.

"Other Georgians include Dr. Robert Batley, of Rome, and Dr. H. M. Branham, of Brunswick."

Dr. Davidson pointed out that three generations—McDowell, of Kentucky; Long, of Georgia, and John Gorrie, of Florida—are represented in the national statue hall in Washington.

Dr. Mims Gage, of New Orleans, was toastmaster at the banquet.

Operation on 'Abdominal Brain' Described as Aid in Heart Trouble

By STEPHEN J. McDONOUGH, Associated Press Science Writer.

An operation on the "abdominal brain" of the body was declared yesterday by Dr. George Crile, famous Cleveland, Ohio, physician, to offer hope of saving the lives of thousands of persons suffering from heart trouble.

The abdominal brain is a mass of nerve fibers known as the celiac ganglion lying just below the lower end of the breast bone. It controls the action of the heart, digestion, blood pressure, the glands, lungs, many nerves, and to some extent the activity of the head brain. It also governs the circulation of blood in the 62,000 miles of blood vessels within the human body.

Overactivity of this lower brain is largely the cause of high blood pressure, hardening of the arteries, angina pectoris, and other heart ailments because it is the "power-house" of the body, Dr. Crile told the Southeastern Surgical Congress.

The operation on it to relieve these conditions is not new. It consists of cutting many of the nerve fibers running to the heart and other organs to break the circuits of electrical stimulus from the celiac ganglion to them, thus slowing down their activity.

However, the Cleveland surgeon said, "I believe that its general application is the answer to the colossal problem of heart disease in the United States. I say that it is a colossal problem because heart disease is today the principal cause of death in our country and heretofore it has not been adequately dealt with."

To a great extent heart ailments such as high blood pressure are hereditary in that children inherit an over-active lower brain which gives them tremendous physical and mental activity during childhood but causes increasing tension, hardening of the arteries, and angina pectoris in middle or later life.

"The most necessary factor in reducing heart disease mortality is to find these cases early in life. Just as we try to catch cancer and appendicitis in their early stages," Dr. Crile said. "When we can do this I feel sure that thousands of lives can be saved by prompt surgical procedure on the celiac ganglion."

Remarking that he "would much prefer to have cancer than heart disease," the Cleveland surgeon added that in most cases the operation has brought about "almost miraculous results" in the relief of heart pains, stopping chronic headaches, and elimination of the general weakness and exhaustion characteristic of various forms of the disease.

Hint Filibuster in Rate War

Southern Legislators Serve Notice They Will Oppose Rail Aid Unless Discrimination Ends.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—(AP) Prominent southern legislators served notice today they would fight any measures for relief of the railroads, unless freight rate "discrimination" against the south and southwest were stopped.

They expressed their views as a senate subcommittee on interstate commerce concluded hearings on several measures designed to bring about revision of rates alleged to favor the north and northeast.

A hint of a filibuster against any railroad relief bill was given when Chairman Hill, Democrat, Alabama, the subcommittee, said he felt that "so long as there is unlimited debate in the United States senate there will be no legislation to rehabilitate the railroads until the present situation has been remedied."

Representative Rains, Democrat, Georgia, one of the witnesses, said he represented a volunteer group with members from 26 states who were demanding rate revision. Rains spoke to the record statements by railroad representatives to the effect that freight rates were not based upon cost of service but upon "what the traffic will bear."

"Before they can get any legislation passed in this congress, they are going to show more willingness to change this situation," he said.

The pending senate measures include a resolution by Hill calling upon the Interstate Commerce Commission to investigate the present rate structure and revise it, and by Senators McKellar, Democrat, Tennessee; Connally, Democrat, Texas, and Bankhead, Democrat, Alabama, to declare freight rate discrimination unlawful. Hill expressed the view that "there can be no statesmanlike approach to this problem unless the discrimination is first ended."

Rains told the subcommittee that "no matter what kind of a shot in the arm we give the railroads in their present desperate situation, it will not be effective unless the carriers sell more transportation at lower unit cost."

He said the railroads could not do this under the present rate structure, and added:

"Their present tendency is to try to solve their problems by raising rates. But thereby they encourage competing forms of transportation."

Senator Miller, Democrat, Arkansas, called the present structure "a crazy quilt" and demanded that rates be determined upon a national basis.

"We were freed from physical slavery in the south and southwest in 1865, but we are still placed in an economic bondage which includes all races by this lack of a national rate structure," he said.

Senator Lee, Democrat, Oklahoma, well known as an orator, announced he was enlisting "for the duration of the war on discrimination in freight rates."

Miller, Lee, McKellar and Bankhead all insisted the problem of freight rate revision was a national one, rather than one for the benefit of any one area.

"We must have in the south a consuming public with purchasing power, otherwise the whole nation suffers," Bankhead said. "We can't have that with the present discrimination in rates. Just as the southern states are afforded an opportunity to build themselves up, so will those who trade with them benefit."

(Senator Bankhead has a bill pending, which, while it doesn't lay down any statutory rule for rate-making, seeks to break down official territory discriminations and establishes a national policy. (Senator Bankhead inserted in the record a letter from Judge Blanton Fortson, of Athens, in which the Bankhead bill was warmly endorsed. The letter set forth that at a recent meeting of freight rate enthusiasts in Atlanta, it was felt that Senator Bankhead has hit upon the right remedy.

"It was felt," Judge Fortson wrote, "that your approach is the correct one; that if congress would first prohibit regional territorial discriminations in rates and then direct the ICC in explicit terms to revise immediately the national rate structure so as to eliminate regional differences and bring about uniformity on a national point of view, a satisfactory solution of the problem could be reached without violating the traditional congressional policy of laying down general rates, but leaving the details to be worked out by the administrative commission."

He expressed the view that under the present interstate commerce act the Interstate Commerce Commission has the authority to end the alleged discrimination, but said the commission seemed "totally unwilling to do it."

He added he blamed no one for the present rates because "the railroads have built them up over a period of years."

McKellar said the southern states "don't want to take advantage of any other part of the country, but we do need equalization."

Hill said the subcommittee would have the testimony at its hearings printed as soon as possible and then decide whether to report any of the pending measures.

ROBERT ANSWERS 'LOBBYING' CHARGE

WASHINGTON, March 7.—(AP) Lawrence W. Robert Jr., secretary of the Democratic national committee, replied today to criticism by Representative Kennedy, Democrat, New York, that the party official was lobbying in behalf of reduced southern freight rates.

Robert, a Georgian, said in a statement he had "talked freight rates constantly since 1916 with everyone who would listen."

"I am just wondering," Robert said, "if when Mr. Kennedy's constituents in New York learn the truth about the cost of their food, clothing, etc., which are increased by virtue of the present unfair and discriminatory rate structure, they will not recall he has been in congress for some nine years without doing anything about it."

He suggested that the lobbying Kennedy had in mind might be that by railroads "to maintain these unfair rates and to protect some of the vested interests around his city of New York."

Robert said he had talked about rates many times with President Roosevelt.

"He is probably much more conversant with this highly important national subject than Mr. Kennedy," Robert added, "and he has several times strongly advocated a fair and equitable freight structure for all sections of the country, and has particularly pointed this out as a matter to be corrected in helping to alleviate the problems of the south."

Yankees Coming With Alabama Flag

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 7.—(AP)—This old Confederate capital, which fell to the invading northern armies 75 years ago, heard again today: "The Yankees are coming," but this time it formed a delegation of welcome.

Three Iowa "Yankees" will arrive here tomorrow, returning Alabama's "secession flag" taken away by a northern soldier during the War Between the States.

Historic Montgomery was ready to repay in hospitality the friendly gesture of the Tall Corn state.

The tattered banner was discovered in the Iowa historical department where it had been placed by an Iowa soldier who took it from a public building in Montgomery, in the wake of the war of the Confederacy.

The Iowa legislature, predominantly Republican, directed that state's museum to surrender the flag to Democratic Alabama.

Alabama's legislature will convene in joint session Thursday noon, with Governor Frank Dixon presiding, formally to receive the flag, which will be placed in the state archives building.

Crawford W. Long, who, in 1842, was the first to perform an operation with sulphuric acid as an anesthetic. He was the first to use ether in 1845. He used it first on his own wife, in obstetrics.

A Misunderstood Man! He's No House Breaker

OMAHA, Neb., March 7.—(AP)—"What's your occupation?" the bailiff asked a salesman en route to the jury box in district court.

"A house breaker," was the reply. The bailiff relayed it to the court "housebreaker," and on request from the startled judge, repeated it. Embarrassed, the salesman himself shouted "I'm a broncho buster."

Don't Aggravate Gas Bloating

If your GAS BLOATING is caused by constipation don't expect to get the relief you seek by just doctoring your bowels. What you need is the DOUBLE ACTION of Adierka. This 35-year-old remedy is BOTH a cathartic and a carminative. Carminatives warm and soothe the stomach and expel GAS. Cathartics act quickly and gently, clearing the bowels. They may have caused GAS BLOATING, headache, indigestion, sour stomach and gas pressure for months. Adierka does not grip—it is habit forming. Adierka acts on the stomach and bowels. It relieves STOMACH GAS almost at once, and often removes bowel wastes in less than two hours. Adierka has been recommended by many doctors for 35 years. Get the genuine Adierka today.

CALM YOUR NERVES!

THOUSANDS of weak, nervous women have been helped to regain strength by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, a tonic which aids in toning the general system and calms the nerves.

Mrs. W. H. McFar, 10 - 7th Ave., Montgomery, Ala., says: "My nerves were so bad at times I felt like crying. I am scarcely able to get on my feet. I am disturbed by restless thoughts after. After taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, I am better, my weight increased, I sleep soundly at night and awake mornings feeling fresh and strong. I don't know I had any nerves until I began to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Buy Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription in liquid or tablet form from your druggist today."

Why Let Yourself Get Constipated?

Why endure those dull headachy days due to constipation, plus the inevitable trips to the medicine chest, if you can avoid both by getting rid of the cause? It is your constipation, like that of millions, is due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, the better way is to eat Kellogg's All-Bran.

This crunchy toasted breakfast cereal is the ounce of prevention that's worth a pound of emmergency treatment. It has the power to get regular but to keep regular, day after day and month after month, by the pleasant means you know.

Eat Kellogg's All-Bran every day, drink plenty of water, and see if you don't forget all about constipation. Made by Kellogg with in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

NOTICE is hereby given that at the meeting of the Mayor and General Council of the City of Atlanta, held on the 6th day of March, 1939, an ordinance was introduced and read, providing for the construction of a sewer along and to Alamo Street from Fairbanks Street to approximately 50 feet east. The general character, material and size of said sewer are as follows: 8" vitrified or concrete pipe; 6" vitrified or concrete pipe house connections with brick flush tank and flush tank with cast iron covers.

SLUM CLEARANCE EDUCATION FOR THE CIVIC LEADERS PRAISE TO TELL TAXPAYERS OF BENEFITS.

Mayor Hartsfield and Atlanta civic leaders yesterday praised a program of the Atlanta Housing Authority to acquaint taxpayers with facts about the support and maintenance of slums.

"There is no escaping the fact that Atlanta has its share of slums and that each taxpayer pays heavily for them," Mayor Hartsfield said. "Slums not only take a heavy toll in the cost of crime, disease, fires and other slum-bred conditions, but call for disproportionately large costs for maintenance of municipal services to combat and control these conditions."

As a part of the educational campaign, a radio program will be presented at 6:30 o'clock tonight. Purpose of the program is to show how slum clearance and low-cost housing typified by such recently-announced developments as the Clark Howell Homes and John Hope Homes will benefit not only the low income families who become properly housed, but every tax-paying citizen.

Tonight's broadcast will include a series of dramatizations showing the costs to taxpayers of crimes that stem from the slums.

HEADACHE? NERVES TENSE?

THIS—

When your head aches, when your nerves feel as if about to snap, use Capdine. It not only relieves pain gently and quickly, but soothes tense nerves. Capdine's quick action is due to its being liquid—its ingredients are already dissolved, all ready to work.

CAPDINE

NOTICE is hereby given that at the meeting of the Mayor and General Council of the City of Atlanta, at the City Hall in said City, at 2:00 o'clock p. m., on the 20th day of March, 1939, there will come on for consideration a proposed ordinance condemning the old sidewalk pavement on south side of Johnson Avenue from Hillard Street to Jackson Street, which is worn out and no longer useful and is dangerous to public travel thereon, and for the replacement of said old sidewalk with concrete, the cost of which shall be assessed against abutting property owners as provided by the Charter and Ordinances of the City of Atlanta.

At said meeting of the General Council, those persons desiring to be heard in connection with the proposed ordinance will be given the privilege.

Following said hearing, the Mayor and General Council will then take up the passage of said ordinance replacing said old sidewalk with new concrete sidewalk, the cost of which will be assessed against abutting property owners as provided by the Charter and Ordinances of the City of Atlanta.

At said meeting of the General Council, those persons desiring to be heard in connection with the proposed ordinance will be given the privilege.

Following said hearing, the Mayor and General Council will then take up the passage of said ordinance replacing said old sidewalk with new concrete sidewalk, the cost of which will be assessed against abutting property owners as provided by the Charter and Ordinances of the City of Atlanta.

At said meeting of the General Council, those persons desiring to be heard in connection with the proposed ordinance will be given the privilege.

$7 Doorkeepers Disdain To Obey Sarcastic Spivey

By The Associated Press.
Senate President John B. Spivey aired a pet peeve yesterday.

Rapping for order, he asked senate doorkeepers to round up absent members in the halls and in the house for a vote on a proposed amendment under consideration.

No one moved.

"We have about 13 doorkeepers and sergeants back there," said Spivey bittily. "If some of you don't mind getting up and doing a little work, we'd like to have these members notified."

There still was no move.

The senate president leaned over his desk and said with heavy sarcasm:

"Pick a nice, soft chair and take it easy. Maybe we'd better pass out cigars. Maybe I'd just better go myself."

Meanwhile, however, someone found Doorkeeper Willie Galloway who hastened on his mission of rounding up absentees.

Doorkeeper Galloway, elected by the senate, is paid $7 daily. Assistant doorkeepers and sergeants receive $4 per day, the secretary of the senate said.

Tech Gavel Given Speaker Bankhead

WASHINGTON, March 7.—In behalf of Roy Harris, speaker of the Georgia house of representatives, Lawrence Wood Robert Jr., of Atlanta and Washington, today presented speaker of the national house, William B. Bankhead, with a special gavel for use in presiding over the chamber.

The gavel, which was made at the Georgia School of Technology, served to return a courtesy of Speaker Bankhead in presenting Speaker Harris one last year which he had used in the house here.

Mr. Robert, who is secretary of the Democratic national committee, presented the Harris gavel to Mr. Bankhead on a visit to the capitol today.

ice, fresh vegetables, canned food costing less than 10 cents, soap costing 10 cents or less; livestock, seeds, feeds, fertilizers, newspapers, articles of clothing and shoes costing less than $3; kitchen utensils used for canning in the home or community centers and farm machinery costing $50 or less. Foods sold in colleges, schools, universities and churches also would be exempted.

Galleries Crowded.

Rejecting an attempt to make the luxury tax a retail sales tax as well, the Georgia house continued wordy discussion of the revenue measure.

Galleries were crowded most of the day as legislators took up the luxury tax bill paragraph by paragraph, flaring frequently into debate over various provisions and suggested amendments.

Pending completion of the debate on the luxury tax measure, the house showdown vote on taxes was deferred. Already awaiting a decisive vote is the 3 per cent retail sales tax bill which the house completed drafting last night. The procedure calls for completion of the luxury tax bill and then a vote.

The sales tax is before the house with committee approval. The luxury tax as a substitute plan, however, is awaiting a decisive vote.

Some administration allies even predicted that passage of the sales tax with the provision for a referendum would result in a veto by Governor Rivers. The Governor, however, continued silence on the legislative situation, asserting he did not intend to "rock the boat" either way.

The house voted, 71 to 39, against an amendment increasing the scope of the luxury tax measure to include a 3 per cent levy on utilities and retail sales of personal property amounting to more than $100.

Speaker Warns House.

The amendment had been offered by Representative Wilmer Lanier, of Richmond, who asserted the sales tax referendum provision killed that bill and that his proposal would, in effect, make the luxury levy a retail sales tax on the items affected.

Meanwhile, Speaker Harris warned legislators if they did not "raise some money to finance the state program mighty quick" he would seek to amend the present appropriations bill to make the reductions clause apply to every item in it, including gasoline and automobile license tag taxes.

This clause acts as a brake on spending by forbidding payment to departments of appropriations in full when state revenues do not equal the prospective expenditure.

It provides that all departments shall be cut on a pro rata basis to sums within available revenues.

Harris pointed out that under his plan, every state department would be cut alike.

"I had hoped to cut appropriations 20 per cent to take care of the situation without bothering the highway program and financing the cut without tearing up the highway department," Harris said.

When General Segismundo Casado and his military defense council seized power in Madrid Sunday night, Negrin and his ministers fled from the capital toward Albacete, 140 miles to the southeast, the official related.

The Casado group had issued secret orders that every precaution be taken to prevent the escape of Negrin officials.

The secrecy was believed that the revolt was local, and the troubles in other parts of the one-fourth of Spain under Loyalist control were only minor.

The artillery fire was mostly in the northern sectors, around the shell-shattered ruins of University City where insurgent troops are holding advance trenches only a few hundred yards away.

Rifle and machine-gun fire also was heard from the direction of the northern districts.

Colonel Segismundo Casado, leader of the military coup d'etat which overthrew the Negrin regime Sunday and drove its leaders in flight to France, moved troops through the streets and deployed them in strategic positions.

Troops loyal to the Mija regime were entrenched in the center of the city as well as in the outlying areas.

It was announced that the entire Loyalist air force was supporting the defense council with the exception of four planes which Communist leaders used to flee from Spain.

Among the Communist leaders who fled was Colonel Hidalgo de Cisneros, chief of the Loyalist air force under Negrin who escaped to France.

Disorders continued at the naval base of Cartagena on the Mediterranean, where a revolt broke out and their crews of 3,000 men came to Bizerte after fleeing Saturday from revolt-ridden Cartagena, where they had been bottled up during most of the Spanish conflict.

The warships dropped anchor off the port and received French officers aboard to supervise disarmament and sanitary inspection.

Officials said the Republican ships would be held at Sibi Abdallah arsenal until the crews would be placed in concentration camps. The surrender of the Spanish fleet recalled the internment of General Peter Wrangel's White Russian navy at Bizerte in 1920 after defeat by Soviet forces.

The vessels were reported to be carrying several thousand refugees in addition to normal crews.

Representative Spence Grayson, of Chatham, introduced a bill yesterday to outlaw the practice of salary buying.

It permits, however, the lending of money with salaries and wages as collateral but limits the interest on such loans to 1 1/2 per cent a month.

Grayson said he had heard of instances where loan companies operating on the basis of buying salaries had obtained as much as $20 per cent in a year's time from a borrower.

His bill would make void any contract to purchase a salary and would make it a misdemeanor to contract to buy a salary.

ECONOMY PROBERS LAUDED BY SENATE

House Committee Votes Continuance Until Inquiry Is Completed.

High praise for the house economy investigating committee was given yesterday by the state senate shortly after the house state of the republic committee recommended continuance of the group until the investigation of all state departments and agencies is completed.

Senator James Boykin and Senator H. L. Causey authored the senate resolution which placed the upper branch of the assembly on record as expressing its appreciation and commendation of the economy "and the work it has done and is doing."

The Boykin resolution took note of the savings already effected by the committee and declared the group, headed by Representative Wilmer D. Lanier, of Richmond county, is rendering the state a splendid service.

The house state of the republic committee recommended that the members of the economy group be empowered to continue their investigation at a per diem of $10 after the close of the regular session and to make their full report to the Governor.

The senate has not yet acted on this resolution.

Daughters Watch Daddies at Work in State Senate

Only 7 Days Left For Enactment Of Revenue Bills

Only seven more legislative days remain for enactment of revenue legislation, Speaker Roy V. Harris said last night.

The presiding officer of the house, where all tax measures must originate, drew attention to 10 working days remain before sine die adjournment at midnight, March 18, but the last three of these must be devoted to senate bills pending in the house.

Under the law, a bill must be read three times, on separate days, in each house before enactment. Revenue bills passed by the house later than March 15 could not be enacted. Only exception would be a measure passed on the morning of March 16, immediately transmitted to the senate and read for the first time in that body on the same day—a maneuver sometimes resorted to in the closing hours of a session.

WHAT DOES GEORGIA OFFER?

The New Jersey Council, an organization created to promote the advantages of that state, is sponsoring advertisements in leading business magazines, designed to induce industrialists seeking new plant sites to locate in New Jersey.

In a recent advertisement, among other advantages listed, stress is placed upon "fair taxation . . . and government that has demonstrated its willingness to co-operate with industry."

A little heart-searching self-inspection might be valuable to Georgia, just to discover what this state has to offer prospective manufacturers interested in establishing new factories in Georgia.

Businessmen of today, in selecting locations for their industrial plants, consider many factors. Climate, living conditions, transportation facilities, raw material and market availability, power supply and labor conditions are only a few factors to be taken into account.

One of the most important considerations any alert businessman investigates, with utmost care, is the tax system and probable tax developments in the state where he contemplates investing his capital.

The picture that prospective newcomers to Georgia see today cannot be very attractive in regard to taxes.

The state has launched an ambitious program of better education, greater social security and improved health conditions for its people. That program meets with the approval of all forward-looking citizens. It was overwhelmingly endorsed at the last two general elections.

The revenue of the state is far from sufficient to meet the costs of this program for progress. The state's tax structure is a thing out-of-control, stuck all over, like a patchwork quilt, with makeshift patches originally intended to be merely temporary, but which have remained, with added patches, year after year.

The state legislature is now embroiled in a tax dispute so confused it seems almost inevitable the outcome will leave Georgia's tax picture in worse condition than it was before the assemblymen began their deliberations. The problem has been entangled in innumerable political ambitions and rivalries.

If Georgia is to share in the new prosperity which every factor foreshadows for this country, she must put her tax house in order. There is nothing so vitally important to the future of the state as this. If it is not done there need be no surprise when the wave of decentralization of industry ignores this state and leaves it behind in the economic progress of the rest of the nation.

Most important of all, from the businessman's viewpoint, is a reasonable stability to the tax program. The condition he fears most is uncertainty, when he doesn't know, every time the legislature convenes, what changes in the former tax load, or additions, are to be imposed before it adjourns.

Georgia's entire tax structure is antiquated and outmoded. Until it undergoes complete revision there will be perennial disputes and arguments and confusions. For the sake of the future of the state there is nothing so badly needed as a complete overhauling of the tax program. This should be done, once and for all, leaving reasonable prospect that no further patching will be necessary for years to come.

Such a revision would serve to bring new industry to the state, thus increasing both the total wealth and the average income of all Georgians. Given more wealth, tax revenues would increase. There would be sufficient money for the entire program of humane service and public progress the people now demand. And it would be the foundation for a future growth that would quickly lift this state out of the bottom brackets in the statistical tables on income, education, health and general human well-being.

Why the well-dressed man is told he needs 18 suits we never knew. They couldn't put five across in contract bridge.

BRIGHTER HOPE FOR PEACE

There has been a strong undercurrent of optimism in the events of the last two weeks in Europe, which brings a hope that a lasting basis for peace may be built during the year to come.

Two weeks ago it would not have been possible to say this. Even today, it may be a false hope. There can be little doubt that a tense situation will be constructed before this month is out or early in April. But it should be little more than a weighing of power to shape the appeasement demands of the totalitarian states. Of course, in such a procedure, there is always the danger of a spark starting a fire that cannot be controlled. That is why, the calmer minds should be firmly in control, and an excellent reason why the United States should mind its own business until and unless it appears national interests are too deeply involved for the maintenance of strict silence.

Probably the strongest factor in the possibility of peace is the eagerness with which Germany has grasped at the preliminaries to trade negotiations with Great Britain. Her internal economy is near the bursting point; her structure is strained to the limit by armament expenditures which England has shown she can meet and surpass. The democracies have shown a firm hand—almost a desire to fight it out. Finally, but by far not least, the German people themselves have demonstrated an embryonic resurgence toward independence from a regime that lives only for adventure. In this indicated desire for peace the United States has played no small part. The President has, to be sure, hinted at the mailed fist, but there are signs which show he has shown it wisely—given a glimpse at it, as it were, rather than a full view under a sensitive chin.

There is danger that the democracies may, if clearly holding the upper hand, seek to preserve the tragic errors of Versailles and thereby force the dictators along their only alternative course. If, however, England and France demonstrate a willingness to free Germany from the shackles that stifle her people and her trade, a natural sequence of improved world conditions and improved world tempers may be expected.

Several things should follow in the wake of an appeasement program which is neither a yielding to the dictators nor an enforced maintenance of the peace. The first should be a reduction in armaments and a halt to the mad race for arms control now being conducted on a world-wide scale. The second should be a reassertion of individuality on the part of the German people, a start on the slow process to eliminate all vestiges of the Nazi terror. Mussolini would be relegated to the shadow in which he belongs. The democracies would then be free to halt Japan in Asia, possibly by a second sensible balancing—or appeasement—program.

Just as the United States has been able to warn Germany and Italy publicly, if only indirectly, so should it be able to assert privately to England and France that appeasement—or balancing—within decent bounds is the desire of the American people. The democracies have been made infinitely stronger since Munich by the United States, but that strength is not lent for another Versailles betrayal of American ideals. It can easily be withdrawn if there is unreasonableness.

Whatever the outcome, it is to be hoped the United States has learned a lesson from the events of the last few years and will maintain the minimum armed strength necessary to enforce decent respect throughout the world.

WHAT'S WRONG WITH WIVES?

George Gallup has stepped bravely into many a troubled sea of public opinion, coming to the top with the answer after a mighty battle, but thus far he has not dared meddle in the sacred field of matrimony. He may know all the answers when it comes to political and social feeling, but it remained for the Ladies Home Journal to venture into finding out what men honestly thought about marriage and wives.

The results of the poll reveal the full extent of the intertidal of the publishers.

Men believe these to be the great faults of women: (1) they are too jealous, (2) they are too often nagging and jealous, (3) they are too willing to pet and kiss before marriage, (4) they are not concerned enough with keeping romance after marriage, and (5) they are too busy with things outside the home.

Be all that as it may, the other answers in the survey belie the apparent disaffection; it would seem that these complaints are superficial, since more than 75 per cent of those questioned thought that married men live happier lives than bachelors; that wives are as sympathetic after marriage as before; that they handle household finances better than a man, and that they are no more to blame for the rising divorce rate than men.

And, too, it might be said the majority of those making the criticism were not gentlemen. It has been well determined in prose and song that "gentlemen prefer blondes," yet this poll develops the reverse hypothesis. For 59 per cent voted they prefer brunettes, 31 per cent blondes and 10 per cent, read-headed women. Page Dr. Gallup. It can't be true.

The free American need join no bund. To get that sense of power, he buys a grandstand seat and bawls, "kill the umpire!"

Until you come down with it, it's only the mild form of whatever it is that is going around.

Editorial of the Day

THE INEVITABLE QUESTION

(From the Columbia State.)

South Carolina needs improved individuals vastly more than it needs more paved roads, but it is spending, out of public funds more for roads than for primary and secondary schools, which are the only schools ever attended by the great mass of people. If South Carolina is to thrive, it will do so because of increased working skill of countless thousands of individuals. More paved roads cannot rescue this community from poverty, but better trained individuals might do it. And South Carolina's moral obligation to help take care of the helpless may be more compelling than its obligation to motorists.

We simply cannot understand how South Carolina is to develop satisfactorily if the road program forever requires so much money that not enough is left for proper education of children, and not enough for decent care of those who cannot take care of themselves. If South Carolina were wealthy there would be enough money for all purposes, but South Carolina is poor.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

MOST IMPORTANT POLITICALLY WASHINGTON, March 7.—The situation among the Democrats of the senate has not been dramatized by any evening caucus resounding with fury against the President, as the house Democrats' situation was. Nevertheless, the most important political fact in Washington today is the extraordinary bitterness and disunion, the violence of feeling against the White House among the Democratic senators. By virtue of their position, they have more influence with their party's organizations than any other single group. Their hard feelings, expected to mellow as the session continued, have, on the contrary, endured.

Matters have now reached a pass where even the most stalwart and optimistic New Deal senators frankly admit that Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley has only 15 invariably reliable votes. And this is an overwhelmingly Democratic senate, in which 69 men should be poor Barkley's faithful followers.

To remedy the situation, the unhappy and rather maladroit leader has tried hard to spread good will. Among other things, he has arranged a series of intimate lunches, held in the cozy office of the secretary of the senate, Ed Halsey, at which he and other Democratic senators swap stories, talk shop and enjoy themselves. The custom is an old one, and was once useful to Joe Robinson. But, although Barkley has in some sense systematized it, he has got nowhere. Once the meal is over, the friendly feelings wear off, and, an hour or so later in the lobbies, the lunchers may be heard cursing the President (and Barkley) as vigorously as ever.

THREE-WAY SPLIT

Now, as before, the senate Democrats may be divided into three rather clear groups. But the groups have changed. For example, the New Deal faithful—men like Minton, of Indiana; Neely, of West Virginia, and Bilbo, of Mississippi—used to number about 30 under Joe Robinson. Now they are reduced to 15. The middle-of-the-road group, which has not changed much in size, is now distinctly rebellious and inclined to blame the President for Democratic difficulties. And the anti-New Deal irreconcilables, once a little body of men like Carter Glass, Harry Byrd and Peter Gerry, of Rhode Island, are now the most influential men in the senate.

The surge toward conservatism and away from the President is so strong indeed that it has carried some men, like Jimmy Byrnes, of South Carolina, and Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, all the way from leading positions among the faithful to leadership of the rebels. There is but one exception to the rule—Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, who is being courted by the New Dealers, and is courting them in turn.

PARTY CONTROL

Nor can the changed feeling be explained away as the ordinary phenomenon of a second term, or the natural reaction to the setback at the polls last November. It has three immediate causes: the court fight, the President's interference to impose Barkley instead of Pat Harrison as senate leader, and the purge. Each of these sowed personal bitterness broadcast in the senate.

Moreover, the interference in the leadership fight, combined with Barkley's solemn ineffectuality, has caused senators to answer his pleas with, "You're not our man. You're the creature of the White House." The changed feeling also has an underlying cause, however. The Democratic senators are sharply conscious of the struggle for control of their party, so conspicuously dramatized in the purge. Three-quarters of them are not the sort of men who would be leaders in the sort of Democratic party which the President envisages. And they are determined to retain their party powers.

Among the changed feelings, the most noticeable is the constant murmur of criticism of the President, often incredibly sharp, which one hears all over Capitol Hill. Others are the unhappy Barkley's powerlessness to control the senate in such simple matters as the creation of a new committee on aviation; the public repudiation of the President on such questions as the $150,000,000 relief cut and the Virginia judgeship, and the constant threat of public humiliation for Barkley by an adjournment of the senate against his orders. As for the long-term result, that may be predicted from the changed feeling's underlying cause. The opposition to the President in 1940 will be extremely strong, very angry and desperately determined.

SILHOUETTES

German Characteristic.

There seems to be something about the German people that makes them peculiarly susceptible to the schemings of would-be despots. They have, through history, been ready victims of the fellows who seize authority and then spend their lives in making rules and regulations for everybody else. The Germans apparently like to be ordered around, to goose-step, both actually and figuratively. They are ready recruits for the regimented way of life.

This national characteristic is no new thing. It wasn't born with national Socialism, nor is it a creation of Herr Hitler.

I recall a story that was told when Kaiser Wilhelm was the worshiped big shot of the German empire.

They had a law which prohibited anyone from speaking disrespectfully of the Kaiser in a public place. No free speech there, you notice.

It happened that a little group seated around an iron table at a sidewalk cafe contained two or three British or American visitors. And the general talk got around to European politics, particularly German. In the course of the conversation one of the visitors referred, with utter lack of respect, to "that fool of an Emperor."

Promptly a gendarme who had been standing near and had overheard, tapped the man on the shoulder and announced he was under arrest, because of the remark made. Charge was lese-majeste, or something like that.

The offender was rather quick-witted and promptly attempted an alibi.

"I was speaking of the Emperor of Austria," he said. The gendarme was stumped, but only for a moment. Then his face brightened.

"You can't fool me," he said, firmly. "There's only one fool of an Emperor and everyone knows which one it is."

And the arrest stood.

Anecdotes

About Hitler.

You've heard the anecdote about Hitler's automobile running over, and killing, a pig on the highway? Hitler stopped the car and ordered Goebbels, riding with him, to go into the farmhouse and pay for the dead pig.

It was 30 minutes or more before Goebbels returned and, when he did, he was drunk. Hitler was outraged and demanded explanation.

"Well," hiccuped Goebbels, "it was like this. I went into the house and said, 'Heil, Hitler! The swine is dead.' Immediately they pulled out their best wine and made me drink with them. An' drink an' drink an' drink."

Here's another Hitler yarn: Der Fuehrer grew tired of affairs of state and expressed a wish to go fishing. So Hitler and Goebbels went together to a stream that marked the boundary between Germany and Switzerland, reputed to be full of fish. But the three of them fished and fished and fished for an hour, without success, of a nibble.

Another fisherman appeared, across the river on the Swiss side. He threw out his line and, almost immediately, pulled in a fine fish. And repeated. Until Hitler called over to him.

"How is it that we on this side have fished for an hour without a bite, while in five minutes you have five fine fish?" asked Hitler. "We have the same type of tackle and are using the same bait as you."

"That's easy," the man shouted back. "On this side the fish are Swiss. And the poor fish aren't afraid to open their mouths, like on yours."

Are Plentiful.

There are scores of such yarns about Hitler. Could fill columns with them. But the fact remains that, regardless of occasional lies, the German people as a whole, today as always, don't mind living under a rigid regimen of regulations. They wouldn't be happy if they couldn't see plenty of Verboden signs.

It takes strong medicine—perhaps drastic defeat on the battlefield, or the accompanying deprivations and hardships for all the people—to make the average German see any advantages in individual liberty, as an American or Britisher understands it. Otherwise, your German likes nothing better than to wear a uniform, obey the commands of some rough drill sergeant and have the ordering of every detail of his life to someone else. In such submergence of individualities into the whole lies the German strength of the moment. But, in that same sublimation of liberty, lurks the germ that will, some day, bring all the totalitarian ideologies to failure.

Twenty-Five Years Ago Today.

From the columns of Sunday, March 8, 1914:

"It seems that woman's suffrage is not so popular as might be among the students of Atlanta schools, Clemson having lost to Tech on Friday night, while defending the woman's vote, and the strange question having gone to pieces on the rocks at Washington Tuesday morning, when the girls of the history third class clashed in debate."

And Fifty Years Ago.

From the news columns of Friday, March 8, 1869:

"The Georgia republican seems to have usurped the proud position heretofore held by the Ohio republican—that of the most enthusiastic office-seeker about the national capital."

Hubby's Intelligence.

Love is the most important consideration in choosing a mate, the 1,500 girls students at Stephens College, in Columbia, Mo., for women have decided in a poll. Only one of the 1,500 said she desired most of all to marry a football hero or at least an athletic "type."

Next to love, in the order of importance, the girls listed these considerations and qualities: Economic stability, ambition, sincerity, intelligence, honesty and personality.

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Precision MIAMI, March 7.—I would like to hear the private thoughts of some tourists from the crazy countries after a few hours or days in Miami, the more so the thoughts of some who had had a chance to fly or motor over the territory that lies within, say, a hundred miles. They would not be entirely charmed, for life and administration lack that army post precision, backed by penalties, which they know at home and without which, it would seem to them, any country must go to rot and riot. Nor would they be pleased by the waste of land and fruit of the land, still so apparent in Florida even after 20 years of exploitation, booms, rapelapses and cultivation. To people who live on rations and eat bread made of flour diluted with sawdust and buttered with what blubber the careless, easy methods of the Americans and the primitiveness of the country cabins and leaky town slums would be a shocking sin.

Yet they would be certain to carry away feelings of envy and awe, for they would have seen, nothing on the route of any cruise as lovely as some of the groupings of homes and gardens which adorn the shore of the Florida pleasure coast, and peoples of nations which would marvel at the riches of a territory which the Americans make use of only around the edges.

They boast of the roads which have been built, but Florida has half-forgotten stretches of smooth, rutted highways as straight as ruled lines leading off through jungles of pine and vine apparently to nowhere, with occasional vast clearings of oranges, grapefruit and garden truck, ripe in mid-winter.

Abandoned. Just the abandoned groves of the weed-grown and half-blighted trees yielding pinched and speckled fruits, would be worth the lives of whole divisions of Hitlerized Germans or Fascist Italians, but somehow, during the great speculative souflee, Americans bought acreage, cleared it, planted trees and then, by various calamities, financial and personal, were compelled to abandon their farms. Such deserted groves are common, and even without assistance from man many trees still yield fruit that would be a luxury in Italy or Germany.

Deserted Florida skeleton villages with paved boulevards, sidewalks, street lamps and sagging portals, some underlaid with water mains and sewers, would cry out for a dictator to take hold and carry through the original plans by forced labor and confiscated capital. The seas and lakes alive with fish good to eat, would be worked and patrolled, the food distributed to the slaves by the dictator's hand and the endless reaches of untouched soil put to work.

This land, this city and its near surroundings are noted as a place for frivolity, innocent and sinful, according to taste, but the growth continues in spite of many errors and unavoidable disasters. The homes which are rising today are not the lath-and-plaster picture houses of the boom period, but solid houses built to stand against hurricanes, and, true to the predictions of the early speculators in building sites, the climate continues to draw population and capital long after the follies of the boom were written off and forgotten.

Evilness It appears, too, that the evilness that was likely to poison the whole life of the community has been greatly, for night club and gambling activities no longer dominate the social side of existence, although race track gambling helps to support the schools and therefore receives protection from unfair competition.

Great flying boats drone over the latterly suburbs to land from the great Pan American base, an adventurous novelty now grown into an amazing system of transportation. Yet the base, with a traffic of 10,000 in international passengers a month, is not very well known, even to the Americans. But if this were Hitler's land, or Mussolini's, this triumph would be written in fire in the sky and, no doubt, in the fears of the neighbors as well.

Barring a small proportion of the more recent developments, the marvels of Miami and the Miami zone are achievements of private enterprise and private capital. The incidental failures have been private disasters, too, but the success vastly outmeasures the mishaps.

Yes, indeed, a German or an Italian must sail away bug-eyed from a touch at the port of Miami, Fla., a casual possession of the Americans and known to most of them only as a place to play.

'Morning After' Breath

People with "morning after" breath no longer lean confidently over the desk of Hutchinson's police judge in Hutchinson, Kan., with a prayer for forgiveness. The judge had a railing installed in front of his edifice, its purpose to keep miscreants far enough away to provide a "pure air" screen between judge and the "morning after" defendants.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

"EXPORT OR DIE" In his recent speech before the docile and hand-picked Reichstag, Adolf Hitler said: "We must export or die."

The export figures, as released, indicate losses as great as 17 per cent in comparison with the year before. The barter deals have accomplished some good, but not enough.

It seems fair to deduce a few conclusions from the present scene, ignoring all emotions and prejudices.

One is that there is less likelihood of German support of Italian efforts to obtain territory or colonies from France. The recent stiffening of French and British attitudes with the first open declaration of a mutual military pact between the two, indicates these two nations themselves have so decided.

Germany cannot afford to alienate England. She needs the English markets. Italy cannot afford to alienate the English market. England probably has been working along this very line, playing one against the other.

Dr. Hjalmar Schacht has been instructed, according to reliable reports from Berlin, to institute a great campaign to improve Germany's foreign trade.

If this be true, as it apparently is, it must necessarily mean less co-operation between Germany and Italy and a lessening of the tension with regard to territorial and colonial claims by both Germany and Italy. If Germany and Italy fail to improve their trade there may be a return to talk of war and aggression.

It begins to look, although the view is not yet clear, as if England once more has muddled through.

NO LESSENING OF THE PACE

Meanwhile, one may expect no lessening of the pace. Last winter in Germany I could feel the tension of this pace, must, by now, be much more feverish. It was to be felt in the beer halls where they sang. It was to be felt in the streets. It could be seen in the intense activity of building, speaking, marching. Last Saturday the New York Times printed an article from Anne O'Hare McCormick, from Berlin. She said, in part: "The mystery of Germany deepens as you try to penetrate it. It is like a machine geared to top speed and running away . . . Who runs this machine? Where are the brains, the organizers, and the works of 80,000,000 people if these people are organized and worked. Herr Hitler may make the political decisions, but certainly he does not administer the works. With the exception of Field Marshal Herman Goering, who has developed great drive and executive ability, the Nazi hierarchy is composed of commonplace men, agitators who rattle around in their big jobs and live in their big appropriated mansions . . . German cannot be running at her present speed just by her own momentum . . . Who runs the machine? To some destination it is running at ever-increasing speed. But who decides where?"

That is something of the feeling. Nevertheless, it seemed to me the German hierarchy was not quite so commonplace. Hitler had men of abilities. It is true they were men who went off on the other. Goebbels and Goering, for instance, always hated one another. He used them both.

A LETTER FROM GERMANY

I have a letter from Germany which arrived only a day ago. It is from a newspaper man who for 16 years has been at work in Europe.

He tells a curious and, I believe, true story. It must be remembered that the German people have little opportunity to learn what is happening. They were told that Hitler wanted peace and would give them peace. They wanted the strong arm of protection he offered. They could learn nothing from their newspapers. The radio sets will bring in only the most powerful foreign stations. It is no exaggeration therefore to say that no more than a few hundred of the 80,000,000 Germans and Austrians knew there was a world crisis which Germany was precipitating. The letter said: "Not until the Czechoslovakian mobilization did the German people learn there was something wrong. They were stunned to find themselves on the verge of war. The result was stunned to churches of a sudden became jammed. Thousands of women began to pray for peace. They began to pray for Chamberlain. I think I am right in saying that Hitler is not as popular as he was a year ago. The businessmen, who and their business halted by the mobilization, are worried. Working hours have been increased and wages have not. The church, more particularly the Catholic church, has been strengthened by facts of the mobilization. No one who does not want war and now even Hitler knows it. I don't know what will follow. A few radio programs from England, France and America, broadcast in Germany, have been heard and they have given another side. There are many Germans dazed by what has happened."

I believe that letter. I do not think it will mean any immediate change, for that matter, within the months of this year. Except to turn Germany toward peace.

Families In a Stockade Were Never Safe If Only One Man Watched For Indians

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

To the American newspaper reader, who sees the headlines but never is privileged to look behind the scenes, the greatest mystery of this century is the apparently deliberate or indifferent suicide of a great nation.

England isn't dead yet, by a long shot. It is still the richest empire and the strongest power. But it is like a strong man caught asleep in a forest and surrounded by fast-closing wolves.

Observe how Germany, Italy and Japan take turns striking at the nation's flanks. It seems a well-planned effort to crack English nerves. It began when Italy, bent on taking Ethiopia, dared England to interfere and England backed down without firing a shot. Japan destroyed English property and rights in China and England could do nothing about it. Hitler took Austria and the better part of Czechoslovakia, in spite of English protest, and England dared not risk conflict. Italy and Germany, working with Franco, won a victory in Spain that threatens the English "lifeline," and England could make no move to protect herself. Now Japan has seized a Chinese island midway between England's crown colony of Hongkong and her naval base at Singapore, and when that island is fortified it will threaten England's possessions like a knife held at a man's throat. Yet England does nothing.

Why? What induces a strong nation to endure, as though in helpless resignation, the destruction of its prestige and the open threat to dismember its empire?

The answer is given in one word—planes. Germany and Italy have them. England and France have not. Such authorities as Lindbergh and S. Paul Johnston, having visited German factories and flown German planes, agree with lesser authorities that the dictators are equipped to control the air and keep control. They were ready to

Neutrality Act Encourages War---Roosevelt

Has Not Served Cause of Peace, President Says, as Senate Passes Army Rearmament Program.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—(AP) President Roosevelt expressed a conviction today that the neutrality act had not served the cause of peace, asserting, in fact, that it may have encouraged some nations to threats of war.

His statement, which immediately stirred predictions of another struggle between the chief executive and the senate's "neutrality" and isolation blocs, was made almost simultaneously with a senate vote approving the bulk of the administration rearmament program.

And, just beforehand, Admiral William D. Leahy, the chief of naval operations, indicated the navy may ask soon for a bigger fleet, as a result of reports from Tokyo that Japan intended to make its navy the equal of any that sails the seas.

Declines Amplification.
The president, speaking at a press conference, declined to amplify his remarks on the neutrality act and when asked if he advocated the repeal of the law, he replied simply that that question was not on the carpet today.

As for his statement that the law had encouraged threats of war, it was well known that some administration officials believed Adolf Hitler was strengthened during the crisis of last fall by the fact that the law would largely have prevented his opponents, in case of war, from drawing upon the rich resources of America.

The law provides that when the president finds a state of war to exist he shall invoke the act and draw up a list of materials of war which thereafter may not be exported to either warring nation. Other supplies may be purchased if bought for cash and carried away on non-American ships. The latter clause, known as the "cash and carry provision," is due to expire in May.

Wider Discretion.
The administration, it is well known, has never been entirely satisfied with the neutrality act. On good authority, it is said that it wants, and, throughout the controversy over that law, has wanted a much wider discretion in the shaping of foreign affairs in the event of a major war than that measure permits.

The president's statement on neutrality, the senate's passage of the rearmament bill, and the indicated move for a bigger navy, were but a part of the day's developments in connection with the twin and much disputed questions of national defense and foreign policy. In addition:

Mr. Roosevelt flatly asserted his opposition to a national referendum vote prior to a declaration of war.

War Referendum Plan Continues To Have Support Of American Public, Gallup Opinion Poll Reveals

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP, Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

NEW YORK, March 7.—The constitutional amendment introduced in the senate last week requiring a national referendum before the United States can engage in a war overseas is approved, at this time, by a majority of American voters.

On four occasions in the last two years the American Institute of Public Opinion has conducted cross-section surveys on the war referendum plan.

The vote in the latest survey was on the following question: "Should the Constitution be changed to require congress to obtain the approval of the people in war—a proposal with powerful backing in congress. Such a requirement, he told his press conference, might easily impair the defense of the country.

The army and navy announced that they would conduct joint war games in mid-April, involving the teamwork of land, sea and 'air' forces in repelling a European "invasion" of the New England coast. More than 200 war planes, 15 battleships, smaller craft and units of the army will participate.

Guinea Plea.
The navy reiterated its plea for harbor improvements at the far Pacific island of Guam, so that the United States could have a "listening post" and scouting base to report the movements of foreign fleets in case of war or strained relations. Rear Admiral Arthur B. Cook, testifying before the senate naval affairs committee, emphasized the importance of the "strained relations" phase, since, he said, wars are not "declared" nowadays.

President Roosevelt authorized the construction of four 6,000-ton cruisers in private shipyards. Congress had given him the option of such action or of building two in naval yards and two in private yards. Charles Edison, assistant secretary of the navy, said construction in private yards meant lower cost, more speed and great uniformity.

The bill passed by the senate, by a vote of 77 to 8, authorizes an expenditure of $358,000,000 on the army, $300,000,000 of which is to go to the air corps to bring its strength to 6,000 first-class planes and increase its personnel.

(The 6,000 planes had previously been approved in a preliminary test vote yesterday.)

Panama Defenses.
Other items included in the bill are $23,750,000 for strengthening the defenses of the Panama Canal, and $34,500,000 for the purchase of war supplies from private industry so that the latter may receive "education" in the production of such materials.

The bill had been approved by the house in somewhat different form and now goes to conference. Admiral Leahy said of the reports of proposed changes in the Japanese naval strength, that "if a foreign power increases its naval strength materially, it will be necessary for the United States to increase its strength."

Leahy, at a press conference, commented also on the United States' recent war games centering around the Caribbean. He declared that they resulted in a successful defense against a theoretical attack.

Some destroyers and submarines of the attacking forces succeeded in getting as far as Puerto Rico and points northeast of Haiti, he said, but not a single "invading transport" got within range of American territory.

a national vote before the United States could take part in a war overseas."

That war referendum issue was put to the voters in 1936, 1937 and 1938, and the trend of sentiment has been as follows:

	Yes	No
Sept., 1936	71%	29%
Oct., 1937	73	27
Oct., 1938	68	32
Today	58	42

When the Ludlow war referendum bill was introduced in congress last year, President Roosevelt vigorously opposed its passage, arguing that such a measure might tie the hands of the state department in dealing with foreign countries. This opposition may account for part of the decline in sentiment favoring the referendum, but the latest survey results indicate that the referendum idea has by no means been killed so far as popular support is concerned.

Women were more strongly in favor of the referendum than men. The young voters, those below 30 years of age who would presumably have to do most of the fighting if war were declared, were more in favor of the referendum than the older voters. Among the various income groups voters in the upper and middle levels were less anxious to have an amendment than those in the lower level.

	Favor Referendum	Oppose
Upper Income Group	45%	55%
Middle Income Group	54	46
Lower Income Group	67	33

EX-ATLANTAN SUES TO RECOVER TAXES

Frank Hawkins Claims Refund Is Due on 1934 Gifts.

A suit to recover excess federal taxes on gifts he made in 1934 was filed yesterday in United States district court by Frank Hawkins, against W. E. Page Jr., of Columbus, and the First National Bank of Atlanta as executors of the estate of W. E. Page, former Georgia collector of internal revenue.

Hawkins' petition states that in 1934 he gave away properties he valued at $329,577, on which, after deductions, a federal gift tax of $12,203.20 was due.

The internal revenue collector valued the gifts at $434,857.50 and, after deductions, assessed a gift tax of $20,529.60.

Hawkins seeks to recover $6,058.42, plus 6 per cent interest from December 21, 1935, and $2,686.40, plus interest from July 16, 1936.

Included in the transfer were 526.4 shares of common stock in the Olympia Investment Company which Hawkins valued at $800 a share, and Page at $800.

Hawkins is a former Atlanta banker, who, according to the petition, now resides in Dade county, Florida.

CLUBHOUSE DEDICATION.
SPARTA, Ga., March 7.—The Linton community, one of the oldest settlements in Georgia, will dedicate its new clubhouse March 17 with a banquet for 100 or more guests. The women of the community raised the funds for building the structure, and the men handled the carpenter work.

GAME AND FISH LAW CHANGE ADVERSED

Resources Department Reorganization Reported Killed by Committee.

A bill proposing reorganization of the State Department of Natural Resources will be reported adversely today by a subcommittee of the house conservation committee, members declared yesterday.

Although Representative Jack Willis, of Ware county, chairman of the subcommittee, did not report the decision of his group, other members asserted the vote against the reorganization was four to none, one member not voting.

Guy Woolford, president of the Georgia Forestry Association, and Frank Heyward, former state forester, opposed the measure, while Ed Smith, president of the Atlanta Sportsmen Club, appeared at a public hearing in his favor.

Smith asserted the sole desire of his group was to "have game and fish out of politics," but Woolford and Heyward fought against placing the forestry division under the proposed seven-man commission which would have been set up to control all natural resources divisions.

Opponents of the bill did not fight against revision of the game and fish division.

PLAYS A HUNCH, WINS.
AUGUSTA, Ga., March 7.—Miss Mattie Hammett, employee of a local telegraph company, now believes in hunches. After leaving the office Saturday night, she stopped at a grocery for several purchases, and for no explicable reason held her money, $30, in her hand, in one hand, the purse in the other, she was walking on Broad street a white youth snatched the purse and fled. The purse contained 15 cents.

THIS MORNING

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES II.

The province of the public expert is to do the will of the public in the way of the scientist.

It is no reflection on congress to say that it is not competent to fix the freight rate on a single stove, pipe, fitting, or other article moving out of the south to the great markets of America. But it reflects, on congress mightily, in this column's opinion, to say that it is not competent to lay down general principles under which the freight rates on these articles are to be fixed. It is like telling a jeweler that because he doesn't know all about the delicate insides of the watches he sells he is not competent to select and sell watches. It is like telling the authors of the Constitution that because they were not experts on religion, journalism and location they were not competent to compose a bill of rights.

The crimes said to be done in the name of liberty are very nearly matched by those done in the name of "experts." Needing experts as this age does, dependent upon them as it is, there is nevertheless about as much demagoguery committed in their name as against it. The very fact that there are provinces in which no layman can move with safety or understanding makes it so easy to intimidate laymen in their proper provinces, with dreadful warnings that expert toes are being trod upon and that the world may come to an end. It is important, indeed, not to usurp the experts' place, but it is equally important to keep them in that place.

Experts, in a democracy, are meant to tell us how to do what we want to do, not what we must want to do. The Interstate Commerce Commission and the railroad officials are experts on freight rates. The making of those rates is a delicate operation, with ramifications so wide that to touch one single rate over one single route is to touch, perhaps the whole rate system. For congress to come into this with its crude hands would be vicious, destructive, impossible. The province of congress is not to make rates. But congress must say in whose interests the rates shall be made. It does not tell the army and navy experts how to run their guns and ships but does tell them against whom and for whom the guns and ships shall be run.

That is why, even though a great outcry has been lifted against it and apparently terrifying invocation of the "expert" bugaboo, action by congress in behalf of a freight rate system which shall not burden the south and west more than the east seems to us as proper as it is necessary. It may be that the action proposed has been too specific, that it has threatened to interfere improperly with the experts, but there can be action on lines which will be at once broad enough not to interfere and definite enough to bring the remedy required.

This quarrel between the north and south involves public policy—and it is congress which is supposed to determine public policy. There is a claim that two whole sections of the country are unfairly handicapped in competition with the third section. On so broad and simple a question the congress is perfectly competent to pass judgment—and it is the only body with right to pass judgment. It is competent to say to the experts of the Interstate Commerce Commission that the people of the United States wish the commission, in its science and wisdom, to bring about a system in which all sections shall be served alike. As competent as a jeweler is to tell watch-makers whether he wants gold or silver watches. As competent as the government is to tell the army and navy whether it is to make war or peace. As competent as the Founding Fathers were to tell Americans that, however intricate and involved their ways, they must let each speak, write, worship and assemble at will.

ATLANTAN IS JAILED IN 120 AUTO THEFTS

Arrested in Los Angeles, He Will Be Taken to S. C. by FBI Agents.

Robert Goodwin, of Atlanta, suspected as the head of a ring of auto thieves who over a period of three years stole more than 120 cars and sold them to innocent purchasers in Anderson, S. C., has been arrested in Los Angeles, and will be brought to South Carolina for trial, J. E. Clegg, special agent in charge of the Atlanta office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, reported yesterday.

Clegg said that a $35,000 bond had been recommended for the prisoner. Sixteen of the cars had been taken from Atlantans.

Goodwin, said to have the alias of Robert Whittall, was picked up by FBI agents in California, after the Atlanta office through the Underwriters' Detective Bureau here had checked the motor numbers of some 30 Anderson automobiles, and learned that they had been changed and the cars stolen. It is charged these automobiles had been sold through an unsuspecting Anderson agency.

Further investigation showed the 120 machines were all the same make, all practically new, and all taken from cities in Georgia, Florida, Mississippi and Tennessee. In nearly all instances, fictitious bills of sale were executed in the name of "Robert Whittall." Value of the automobiles was set at approximately $31,500.

Residents of Atlanta and Decatur who had had their automobiles taken and resold include F. L. Lancaster, C. C. Combs, L. S. Tatum, Mrs. Ella R. Luckie, Mrs. W. J. Lynch, T. M. Freeman, R. Thomas, M. E. Carroll, P. C. Stone, D. W. Leary, W. L. Wood, Thomas S. DeFore, G. T. Sparks, Dr. C. Stacy Howell, Dixie-Drive-It Yourself Company and Wade Motor Company.

GEORGIA'S BETA CLUB WILL MEET ON FRIDAY

More than 200 Georgia high school students are expected to arrive in Atlanta Friday for the state-wide meeting of Georgia Beta Club, to be held for two days at the Ansley hotel. Thornton Savage, Tech High student, will preside.

Four sessions will be held, one Friday night and three Saturday. The meeting will end with a dance Saturday night. Prominent Georgia educators are scheduled to speak. These include Professor E. D. Whisonant, superintendent of Baxley High school; Dr. Ralph Ramsey, executive secretary of the Georgia Education Association, and Dr. Paul Cousins, president of Shorter College.

GOOD MORNING

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

"IN JESUS' NAME."
Last Sunday morning J. L. Fortney came, at my invitation, to speak on the Druid Hills Hour station over WGST, which was his first public utterance after assuming the duties of superintendent of the Georgia Baptist Orphans' Home on March 1, 1939. Seated across the table from me in my study, he spoke these words into the microphone:

"I accept the responsibility of trying to serve the nearly 300 boys and girls in our home at Hapeville in Jesus' name and for His sake. I see before me an endless succession of days filled with life-consuming activity and nights filled with an everlasting sense of responsibility. I have faith in the generosity of all who love little children to help us in this great task. I have faith in the foundation already laid by the noble men and women who have given their lives to this great institution. I have faith in the children themselves. But most of all I have faith in Jesus. He taught us how we are to serve these little ones when He took little children in His arms and blessed them. In His name and for His sake, I undertake this great responsibility. I ask you to pray for me and all who are associated with me in the home as we try day and night to do a good job."

I thought that was a great message, and I believe you will agree with me. Mr. Fortney has come from a delightful position of leadership as superintendent of schools in Griffin to give his life in this great institution dedicated to childhood—to children bereft of earthly parents—and Mrs. Fortson joins him heartily in this dedication of their lives. He will find a noble company of men and women at the home who are of like mind in dedicating their lives to this blessed ministry.

And what Mr. Fortney said last Sunday morning about his attitude in accepting this place of service to helpless little folks will find a hearty response in the hearts of the half-million white Baptists in Georgia who believe that this institution is an expression of the Kingdom of God. And not only this institution, but the other orphanages in Georgia, supported by the various religious and fraternal groups, give daily testimony to the deep and abiding love which good people everywhere have for these little neighbors who must look to the friends of Jesus to help them in these tender years of childhood. Heaven's blessings ever attend Mr. and Mrs. Fortney and all the other friends who are serving in the orphanages of our state and the world.

Children Are Asked To Plead for Taxes

Governor Rivers paused in a series of conferences with legislative leaders yesterday to admit a group of visiting grammar school children to his private office.

As the children turned to leave, the Governor called after them:

"Don't forget to see the legislators and ask them to vote these taxes to keep the school open."

LOVE COMES LAST

On Their Way to Town, Laura Tells Nina She Is Going to Marry Bart

INSTALLMENT XXVI

The girl fell in step with her. "I've been trying to figure something out," she said. "What you might call, if you should ever want to use the incident in a story. 'The mystery of the boathouse rendezvous.'"

Laura didn't say anything. She was so startled she couldn't speak. "I was the first person to leave the house after dinner," Hannah said, "and from the bench under the elms I saw your sister come out of the house and stroll down toward the boathouse. Then in about 10 minutes her husband came out, wandered around a bit and went off in the same direction. And finally—" Hannah was obviously enjoying this detailed recital. "And finally," she said again, "I caught a glimpse of a slim figure hurrying through the garden. Since the lower garden gate opens on the path leading to the boathouse, you can draw your own conclusion."

With a forced smile, Laura said, "A man, his wife and an unknown all moving toward the same point in the night. A mystery, perhaps, Hannah, but not yet a story. You didn't by chance go down to see that they all arrived safely, did you?"

Hannah laughed. "There's more to it than that, though," she said. "I went in and peeped. Bart away from father and we sat on the bench talking until presently Mr. Cooper wandered up and Bart called him over. Then you came out of the house—of course I know you had been in your room since dinner," she added, maliciously. "And completing the action, your sister came back some minutes later."

"But now that you've brought them all back, there's no mystery." "Oh, but I haven't brought them all back," Hannah grinned. "Who was the wraith in the garden and what became of her? ... There's your mystery."

The others had gone into the house now and these two stood just outside the entrance, looking at each other as pleasantly as though they were discussing something of no possible importance to either.

"I wonder," Laura said, "why you've told me all this, Hannah. You're really puzzled as to the identity of your garden 'wraith,' I imagine." "Well, no," Hannah admitted. "Not exactly puzzled as to her identity, but just slightly puzzled as to what it was all about. You see, as I put the pieces together, two of those three persons were meeting at the boathouse by appointment—but not all three. One of the three was intruding, and what do you suppose happened when they met down there—or perhaps they didn't meet. You see what a fascinating plot it is, don't you?"

"Would you like to know what happened, and why?" "Heavens, no," Hannah laughed. "I love mysteries." She caught Laura's arm. "Don't take me so seriously, please. It just struck me as funny, that's all. Come on, let's go in—and don't give it any other thought because I've forgotten all about it."

But Laura knew that Hannah's keen mind had sensed a possible triangle and that sooner or later she would hear of it again.

Because Laura all but insisted on that arrangement, Andy rode in front with Bart. "You two men will want to talk business," Laura told Andy, "and Nina and I have a great deal to say to each other." But now that they were alone in the back seat with the cool night air whipping into a pleasant wind about their faces, they were saying nothing at all. There was something between them, but whether it was something real or built up in her own imagination, Laura did not know. She said, "I've missed you, Nina, terribly. Somehow, I never thought you and I could be separated for long."

"It does seem odd, doesn't it?" Nina said. "Just a little while ago we were living in Newbury, just you and I, and expecting to go on living like that forever, I suppose. And now look at us; you a New York businesswoman, and me an old settled married woman."

Laura smiled. "Not old, and probably not yet settled," she said. "Tell me, Nina—are you really happy?"

"Perhaps it was the bluntness of the question that caused Nina to hesitate before she said, 'I married the man I love and I still love him, Laurie. That's happiness, isn't it?'"

"Yes... yes, it's almost the only happiness there is, I think," Laura said. "To marry the man you love and go on loving him and—being sure of his love for you." She waited, almost holding her breath.

But Nina said, simply, "Of course." It was a full minute before she spoke again. "Andy and I had sort of put two and two together and decided you and—"

she pointed to Bart's broad back, "were getting to be something more than business associates. He's awfully nice, Laurie."

Laura nodded. It had come to her in a flash that consciously or unconsciously Nina had expressed a hope. Nina wanted her to be in love with Bart. Her voice had conveyed that and whether the hope was inspired by simple sisterly interest or a purely selfish motive was suddenly unimportant. Since, reasonably, she could not be in love with two men at the same time, to tell Nina she was in love with Bart was, in effect, to tell her that she was not in love with Andy. If she could make Nina believe...

"You use to say you couldn't conceive of my being in love with a man, Nina," she said. "Remember?"

"I might have been wrong, though," Nina answered quickly. "You were, darling." She waited, said after a moment, "Bart and I are going to be married, Nina."

She hadn't meant to say that, but now that she had said it, she was glad she had. Not only had she reassured Nina but she had at last committed herself. And what better time to make it known than at this moment with Andy here to hear it?

"Laurie—" Nina was clutching her. "Not really?" Laura slid forward to the edge of the seat and put a hand on Bart's shoulder. "I was just telling Nina the good news, darling. She doesn't believe it."

Bart half turned, said without taking his eyes from the road, "What good news is that?"

"About us," Laura almost yelled into the wind. "You and I—that we're going to be married!"

There was a dead silence. Andy turned slowly, staring.

"Oh, that!" Bart bellowed over his shoulder. "I thought every one knew by now!"

Silence again—broken at last when Andy said to Bart, "You're a lucky man. I suppose you realize that?"

Bart nodded, grinning.

Nina was squeezing Laura's hand, chattering excitedly. But Laura wasn't listening. She was looking at Andy's shadowed profile, remembering a time when she had said, "I love you, Andy. I love you so much I think I wouldn't want to live if anything happened to take you out of my life..." Nina hadn't taken him out of her life—not quite. But now, definitely, irrevocably, she was taking herself out of his.

It had been Laura's intention to stop at the hotel only long enough to say good-bye, but they were hardly out of the car before Nina announced gaily, "I've just had an inspiration. Before we begin the sad farewells, we're going to celebrate the coming Ford-Wiley nuptials."

Bart smiled and Laura and Andy exchanged quick troubled glances, but no one spoke.

"Nothing elaborate," Nina said, persuasively, "but at least we can go down to the hotel bar for a few minutes. There'll be a crowd clinking glasses and atmosphere—something to remember. After all, it's a very special occasion."

"And why not?" Bart said before either Andy or Laura could protest. He pulled Nina's arm through his and turned toward the hotel entrance. "It's a very, very special occasion," he said.

For a moment neither Laura nor Andy moved. Then Andy said, "There's just about time enough to say this, Laurie: I'm glad—for you. You believe that, don't you?"

"Yes, Andy." They were walking then. "Tell me—do you think Nina was at the boathouse tonight?"

"I'm sure she wasn't."

"You're not sure, Andy. You couldn't be. And I couldn't stand it if I thought I'd hurt her."

"She doesn't seem to be worrying about anything," Andy said. As they entered the lobby, Nina and Bart were waiting at the top of the stairs that led down to the bar. Andy said quickly, "There are things that can never be said again, but the truth is always true. Good luck, Laurie..."

Nina called, "Come on, pokies—you're holding up the party."

Some last words that had been on Laura's lips died there, unspoken.

The bar was crowded. Glasses clinked merrily. Bart asked Nina, "Is this atmosphere adequate—or shall we go somewhere else?"

Nina laughed. She liked it. Her laughter said that and much more. She was completely happy. Looking at her, Laura thought of what the doctor had said to Andy and a lump came up in her throat.

Nina was so young and lovely, so much in love with life. But doctors didn't know everything—they made mistakes sometimes.

Laura said on impulse, "As soon as I finish the story I want you to come back and stay a week or two with me, Nina. With Bart's help we'll collect atmosphere from Harlem to Washington Square."

"Would you let me come, darling?" Nina asked Andy. "If I promised to be a good little girl and not stay out late nights?"

Earlier today he had tried to make her understand she was free to do as she pleased; but he rarely made the same mistake twice. He said, "Not on your life—not without me, anyway."

New Fire Chief Recalls Horse and Buggy Days

'Doc' Styron Wanted To Be Firefighter When a Boy and Now He's at Top of Long Ladder.

By LUKE GREENE.

When the fire bell clanged and the old-time horse-drawn fire engine rattled down the street back in the early 1900's, one young fellow was usually on hand to see the sights and took more than an average interest in what he saw.

His friends called him "Doc" Styron. In fact, they still do. His real name is Charles Crawford Styron. On March 21 he will take over his duties as chief of Atlanta's fire department.

Most any day around the turn of the century he might have been seen hanging around station No. 8 munching an apple from his father's grocery store, or waiting on the corner in hope the fire engine would go rushing past.

His father, the late I. F. Styron, tried to interest the youngster in the grocery business. But his heart definitely was not in that field. He wanted to be a fireman. That was the reason he spent every leisure moment around No. 8 station.

Tougher Job Then.

Today "Doc" Styron stands at the top of the fireman's ladder. He has come up rung by rung. He took the first step in those early days when fighting fires was tougher than it is now.

He's a modest man. You can't get him to say much about the big fires he has helped to battle, or his narrow escapes. He laughs off your questions and changes the subject. But the other fellows know.

He doesn't remember the date of the Grady hospital fire. But in that fire he was gassed and had to spend five weeks in bed.

The blaze was in the negro ward of the hospital. Some films caught fire. It spread rapidly. There were 250 patients on the second floor. Time after time Styron fought his way into the blazing building and returned with patient after patient. Everyone of the 250 patients was rescued by firemen. An explosion added to the menace. A number of the occupants were babies.

Recalls Famous Fires.

The famous fire of 1917 stands out most vividly in Styron's mind. He also remembers the Terminal hotel fire of 1908, the burning of the Piedmont stables on Marietta street and the Star theater fire of 1908. At the time of the 1917 fire he was a driver for Assistant Chief William Butler.

"We have made rapid strides in fire-fighting," Styron said. "We have advanced to keep up with the times. The men are much better trained today, and, of course, our motorized equipment is a distinct advantage."

Chief Styron was born in Hyde county, N. C., on the east coast. His father was a sea captain at that time. Later they moved to Selma, Ala., and came to Atlanta when Styron was three.

"Just like any other boy I always liked to hear the sound of the gong and turned out with the kids to watch the fire engines go by," he said. "But I must have had more interest, for I became a fireman and most of them didn't."

Another thing that probably influenced him in the early days was the fact that Chief W. R. Joiner was a close friend of the family. Naturally, young Styron had talks with the chief and acquired a love for the "smoke-eaters."

Became Fireman in 1908.

He joined the department in May, 1908. He wasn't 21 years of age at the time.

There were no automobiles in the department. Even the chief rushed to fires with a horse and buggy.

Styron was promoted rapidly. He has served at Nos. 3, 5, 8 and 1 stations. He became assistant chief March 29, 1933. For approximately 49 years he has lived in the vicinity of No. 8 station at Carnegie way and Spring street. He now resides at 350 Luckie street. The new chief rarely has time

C. C. Styron, Atlanta's newly-elected fire chief, likes an occasional hand at cards. First, he says, you take the cards and shuffle them like this.

Everything is all set now. With a mighty flourish of his arm, the chief planks down the card. It must have been a good decision, for he takes the trick!

J. C. THRASHER DIES IN HIS 69TH YEAR

Atlantan Was Long a Figure in Public Life; Served Under Talmadge.

J. C. Thrasher, 68, long a figure in Georgia public life, died last night at his residence, 329 Ashburn avenue, S. E. He had been in failing health for some time.

Mr. Thrasher was formerly treasurer of Oconee county, a commissioner of Telfair county, and served as chief food inspector under Governor Eugene Talmadge when he was commissioner of agriculture. He was a member of the State Highway Department until ill health forced him to resign several years ago.

He attended North Georgia College at Dahlonega, the University of Georgia and Georgia Tech, where he was a freshman in the first freshman class at that institution. He was a member of the First Baptist church of Decatur.

Mr. Thrasher was a cousin of Ed Thrasher, of the Internal Revenue Department; of Roy Thrasher, of the state senate, and of C. H. Bishop, manager of the Sears-Roebuck markets.

Surviving are his wife, one son, Haskett Thrasher; two daughters, Miss Sue Thrasher and Miss Asenith Thrasher; two brothers, C. E. Thrasher and N. N. Thrasher, of Ashburn, Ga., and two sisters, Miss Nellie Thrasher, of Ashburn, and Mrs. Pearl S. Sossamon, of Griffin.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later by A. S. Turner & Sons.

GUILD TO REPEAT MUSICAL TONIGHT

Castle Playhouse Will Offer 'Trial by Jury.'

Departing for the first time from its routine of straight drama and comedy, the Atlanta Theater Guild has successfully presented a musical, Gilbert and Sullivan's "Trial by Jury." It will be repeated tonight at the Castle Playhouse, 87 Fifteenth street.

The cast of amateurs, all members of the Guild unit, interpreted the operetta in traditional Gilbert and Sullivan spirit and thoroughly entertained the audience. Commendable performances were given by Edgar Evans as the judge; Margaret McCarty in the role of Angelina; Edmund Phillips as the defendant, and Douglas Rumble as the plaintiff.

Preceding the operetta, a one act fantasy, "The Maker of Dreams" was presented. It was written by Oliphant Brown. Characters were portrayed by Betty Crandall, Drewry as Pierrette; Gilbert Maxwell as Pierrot and W. J. Reese in the title role.—L. R.

COUNTY ZONING BOARD PLANS SESSION TODAY

The newly-appointed Fulton County Zoning and Planning Commission will hear its first two petitions at 2:30 o'clock today in the commission room at Fulton county courthouse. The two petitions will be in reference to zoning in the north side area.

Composed of Robert L. MacDougall, chairman; Frank Neely, Walter S. McNeil and Eugene W. O'Brien, the commission has elected to meet on the second Wednesday of each month. Today's meeting will be the first.

BIDS OPENED FOR WORK AT STATE HOSPITAL

The state hospital authority received bids yesterday on a tunnel and pipe system to heat buildings of the $4,000,000 state hospital at Milledgeville.

J. G. Attaway, of Statesboro, was low bidder for the tunnel construction with $62,000. The Wainer Construction Company, of Valdosta, was second low, bidding $64,304.

The Grinnell Company, of Atlanta, offered the low bid on the pipe system with $76,922. The Automatic Sprinkler Company, of Atlanta, was second low with $78,075.

Sales of 160,719 new and used motor vehicles in Canada during 1938 were made.

REV. JAMES SPINKS DIES AT AGE OF 86

Retired Baptist Minister Was Former Legislator and Editor.

Rev. James Monroe Spinks, 86, retired Baptist minister of Dallas, Ga., died last night at a private hospital. He had been in declining health for a number of years.

Rev. Mr. Spinks was a native of Paulding county and was the first white child to be born in Dallas after its incorporation on land donated by his father.

Before becoming a minister he was a lawyer, being admitted to the bar in 1875 and practicing in Dallas, where he served as counsel for the Southern Railway. He was ordained to the ministry in 1889.

Rev. Mr. Spinks served as representative in the state legislature from Paulding county in 1884 and 1885, a post that his father had held before him. For several years he served as editor of the Dallas New Era.

His last pastorate was Flat Rock Baptist church, near College Park. Among other charges held were at Dallas, where he served for 20 years; Powder Springs church, 16 years; Douglasville, seven years; Woodstock, 10 years; Kennesaw, 10 years; Second church, Marietta, seven years, and at Austell and Smyrna. He was also pastor of Ponders Avenue church and Sharon church in Atlanta.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Sarah Spinks; three daughters, Mrs. G. H. Butler, Mrs. Tempie Ward and Miss Ruth Spinks, all of Atlanta; one son, Homer Spinks; seven grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Funeral services will be conducted at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning at Powder Springs Baptist church, with the Rev. Bob Smith and the Rev. S. F. Lowe officiating. Burial will be in the direction of Awtrey & Lowndes.

BUNNY BERIGAN HERE TOMORROW

First in Series of 'Big Name' Bands.

Bunny Berigan, who swung his way to fame overnight playing the trumpet in Benny Goodman's orchestra, will bring his own orchestra to Atlanta tomorrow night to play a dance engagement at the Shrine Mosque under auspices of the Tech Cotton Club.

The club announced that the Berigan appearance is to be the first in a series of Atlanta dances played by "big name" orchestras. Dancing will begin at 9 o'clock and continue until 1.

Featured singer with the band is Kathleen Lane. The male vocalist is Dick Wharton.

An Alabama agronomist announced he had discovered a fertilizer that would kill weeds in a Bermuda grass lawn but would not injure the grass itself.

F.D.R. SON CHARGES RADIO CENSORSHIP

Elliott Roosevelt Says Fear Rules Stations; Hits License System.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—(AP) Elliott Roosevelt said today that "a censorship of fear" exists in radio.

The second son of the President told the Federal Communications Commission that radio, "for the good of free speech and private initiative in this country," needs a law that will allow a broadcaster to operate without fear even though his worst enemy administers it.

The present requirement that radio stations renew their licenses every six months, Roosevelt said, "tends to act as a restriction upon free speech."

He added: "This censorship may be unintended. It is none the less real."

Instead of requiring stations to make periodic license renewals whether or not they renew every six months, as required by the FCC, or every three years, the maximum allowed by the communications act—Roosevelt urged:

A certificate permitting a station to continue so long as it operates for the public good. Such a certificate would be revokable for cause.

SLAYER IS CAUGHT BY FINGERPRINTS

Misdemeanor Charge Leads To Life Sentence.

A chance arrest at Charlottesville, Va., last month on a misdemeanor charge led to a life sentence for murder here yesterday for Robert Mapp, Atlanta negro.

Mapp escaped last fall after the slaying of Louis Watkins, another negro, and might have remained at liberty indefinitely except that his fingerprints were on record with the Fulton County Identification Bureau.

Copies had been sent to the Washington office of the FBI and his identity was discovered when a similar set was received there following his arrest in Charlottesville. He was brought back by county officers.

COMPOSER TO SPEAK AT REVIVAL TONIGHT

Charlie Tillman, writer of religious music, who is conducting a series of revival services at Northside Methodist church, Hemphill avenue and Fifth street, will explain the origin of his famous hymn, "Life's Railway to Heaven," at the service tonight, beginning at 7:30 o'clock.

Among the compositions of Tillman, which are shown in motion pictures during the revival, are "The Old Time Religion," "My Mother's Bible," and "The Broken Vase."

Boy Fugitive Seeks Refuge From Ma

CHICAGO, March 7.—(AP)—Frank Calindo, who escaped from the house of correction last night, came running back today—with his mother at his heels.

Cuffing him at every opportunity, she had the 17-year-old youth in tears.

Officials decided the mother had done such a good job no further punishment for the escape was necessary.

8 DIXIE GOVERNORS BACK BILL IN UTAH

Telegraphic Barrage Opening Gun in 'Repeal Anti-Cotton Laws' Drive.

JACKSON, Miss., March 7.—(AP)—Eight southern governors tonight joined Oscar Johnston, president of the newly-formed National Cotton Council, in a request to the Utah house of representatives for a favorable vote on a bill exempting from taxes commodities manufactured exclusively from American agricultural products.

Action of the governors followed hard upon the warning by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace that the cotton industry federal intervention by raising interstate barriers to free trade.

The request was believed to be the opening shot in a fight to "repeal laws restricting cotton."

Striking out fiercely against "unfair" laws on cottonseed commodities in northern and midwestern states, Johnston declared "the raw cotton industry will not tamely submit to being victimized and discriminated against."

"They will protest all such legislation and if their protest is not heeded, they will demand that their own legislatures retaliate by penalizing or taxing commodities coming from those states," he warned in a statement issued at Scott, Miss., his home.

Seven governors signing a joint telegram included Frank M. Dixon, of Alabama; Carl E. Bailey, of Arkansas; E. D. Ivey, of Georgia; Richard W. Leche, of Louisiana; Hugh L. White, of Mississippi; Clyde R. Hoey, of North Carolina, and Burnett R. Maybank, of South Carolina. Governor Lee O'Daniel, of Texas, sent an individual wire.

DEMOCRATIC CLUB WILL MEET TODAY

Women Will Discuss Neutrality, Post Office.

Neutrality laws and the United States post office system will be subjects of discussion at a meeting of the Fulton County Democratic Women's Club at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the Henry Grady hotel, Mrs. Max Land, president, announced yesterday.

Mrs. Calvin Shelverton will talk on "Neutrality Laws," while Mrs. William C. Taylor will discuss the post office system. Both will be introduced by Mrs. Carl Binn.

Mrs. B. M. Boykin, first vice president of the organization, will preside.

The group will vote on a change of its constitution and by-laws also, Mrs. Land said.

EXPERTS ACCLAIM KREUTZBERG DANCE

'Master of Ceremonies' Will Be Performed Here on Saturday.

"Master of Ceremonies," which has made Harald Kreutzberg a success in the American theater, will be included on his program when he appears at the Erlanger theater Saturday under the sponsorship of Dance Concerts. When Max Reinhardt produced the European stage extravaganza, "Turandot," he engaged Kreutzberg to create the role of "Master of Ceremonies," which quickly brought him fame.

Kreutzberg's shaven head has mystified many of his audience who gaze in bewilderment to decide his reason for this mode of pate grooming. It is not entirely superstition which governed his adoption of head treatment but the convenience which this lends to his costuming had a bearing on the mode.

And it came about thus: When Kreutzberg was engaged to play the part of "The Jester" in the ballet, "Don Quixote," composed by his eminent musical conductor, Friedrich Wilckens, from a story by Edgar Allan Poe, he was called upon to look poor and unhappy, and at the same time mysterious. The costume design for the character was appropriate, but head-dress after head-dress, wig after wig, was tried and discarded. At last, in desperation, Kreutzberg went down to his barber in the Berlin state opera house, where the ballet was in rehearsal, and ordered his head entirely shaven. The effect was exactly what the costume designer had been striving for, and from that point on character of the Jester—Harald Kreutzberg's first major role—was a great success and it was this role that attracted Producer Reinhardt's attention and made him exclaim, "Kreutzberg is the greatest dancer since Nijinsky."

Opening the program with the regal "King's Dance," Kreutzberg will diversify his performance here with such other popular positions as "Barcarole," "Hanging Man's Dance," "Orpheus' Lament for Eurydice," "Tango at Midnight," "Dance Through the Streets," and "Three Merry Dances for Children."

PLAN OF MOTHER TO KILL SONS TOLD

Accused Slayer Hated Other Babies, Officer Says.

MAHANOY CITY, Pa., March 7.—(AP)—A slight-built mother charged with suffocating her sickly child because he "cried too much" was quoted today by State Police Corporal C. D. Boyle as saying she had planned to kill three other sons.

Boyle said 32-year-old Mrs. Gus Edinger told him the smothered boy, Daniel, 3, "was a nuisance" and that she "couldn't stand" the others—Charles, 9; Ray, 5, and Robert, 2.

The children's father, a WPA worker, went alone to Daniel's funeral today. He was released after questioning disclosed he was asleep Saturday night when the child died.

ents toward something which requires honest work; she should avoid people who will influence her in dishonest policies, and should refuse to allow herself to practice dishonest policies.

"As for a school, honesty should be taught the students, and a dishonest student should be punished and taught the wrong she has done. But, first the real reasons should be discovered if possible, and checked."

Beverly Ann West is chairman of the honesty committee, and other members are Catherine Woodward, Miriam Rouse, Louise Wertz, Margie Sauls, Miss Lizabel Saxon is faculty advisor.

An original skit written by Catherine Woodward depicted a cross-section of a day at Girls' High, and was presented at a recent assembly at the school as a feature of the honesty drive.

Taking part were Catherine Woodward, as a senior; June Brewster and Margie Sauls, as freshmen; Miriam Rouse as a senior and Betty Avans, as a junior.

Miss Annabel Horn has spoken at senior, junior and high freshmen assemblies and Miss Ida Meslin has addressed the low freshmen groups, Miss Beverly Ann West, the chairman, speaks at all assemblies in the drive which continues through Friday.

Pertinax Finds Chamberlain At Peak of Power, Prestige

French Commentator Spends Week in London, Reports Temporization Is the Order of the Day and Prime Minister Hesitates.

By PERTINAX.
(Copyright, 1934, for The Constitution and North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)
PARIS, March 7.—(By Wireless.)—Having just spent a whole week in London and exchanged views with many diplomats, public men and political observers of every kind, I have reached several conclusions about the trend of British policy in the near future.

The capital fact to be recorded is the practical omnipotence now enjoyed by Prime Minister Chamberlain. He never had in the past such prestige and authority.

The increase of his personal power is to be accounted for by the tremendous impulse now given to British rearmament.

Furthermore, the recent statements by Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Halifax about the solidarity with France in case of an Italian attack in the Mediterranean and northern Africa and the serious warnings continuously addressed to Count Ciano, the Italian foreign minister, have spread everywhere the impression that nothing remains of the so-called diplomatic experiment begun last year, when Anthony Eden was dismissed from the post of foreign secretary, and that Chamberlain is no longer in the frame of mind which was productive of the disastrous Munich settlement.

Eden Disappointed.
But other factors must be mentioned to explain the more favorable attitude toward the cabinet of those conservative members of parliament who last autumn seemed to be on the verge of revolt. Eden has sadly disappointed his followers. It was expected from him that he would come forward for a vigorous policy, define it from day to day, assert himself on every occasion as an alternative head of the government, and mercilessly assault the present regime. But he has not dared to take such a strong line.

S-h-h!—Conscription?

There are some faint signs that the prime minister will have to deal soon with the issue of conscription, or, to put it in terms less likely to ruffle British popular feeling, with the problem of creating an army of continental pattern. From time to time, the Paris government cannot but gently and in a low voice remind Chamberlain and his colleagues that the distribution of military tasks cannot remain as it is and that both countries are vitally interested in better apportionment.

His hesitancy and the slow working of his mind are to be observed about other matters of great importance.

Temporization is the order of the day in London. It is to be hoped that the French cabinet will gather enough courage to insist that Chamberlain's empiricism is not suitable to the circumstances of today.

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 7.—Robert T. Baggett has been elected president of the Augusta Typographical Union for the third consecutive term, with T. P. Ward, vice president; Jesse C. Lynch, secretary-treasurer, and George Huntington, sergeant at arms.

A resolution indorsing the proposal offered by John L. Lewis in response to President Roosevelt's appeal for labor peace was adopted by the Atlanta CIO industrial council at a meeting last night.

Another resolution addressed to Attorney General Frank Murphy requested an investigation in Georgia by the civil liberties division of his department, charging interference with the rights of workers to organize.

Livestock Center Opens at Hogansville

Enthusiastic Farmers Hear Speakers Paint Bright Picture of Georgia Industry's Future.

By HERMAN HANCOCK.

HOGANSVILLE, Ga., March 7.—"This purebred bull, gentlemen, was sired by Champion —, out of —." With this preamble, Colonel A. M. Bell, of Douglas, auctioneer, yesterday sounded the prelude to the opening of the Hogansville Livestock Association barns here.

The Hogansville Auction Barn, on the farm of Pierce Smith, just north of Hogansville, was crowded beyond capacity long before the first bid was made.

From early morning farmers, women, 4-H Club girls and buyers began to trek into the auction center, heralded as one "of the most strategically located livestock markets in Georgia," and they continued to come. They sat within the auction arena until it would hold no more; they stood in the auction stall until no others could crowd in; they then stood in front, scores of them, while others sat on the banks around the newly constructed barns and enclosures.

Hogs, Goats, Horses.

A versatile array of livestock was on hand. There were purebreds for stocking farms and keeping the flow of silver coming into this section of Georgia. There were market cattle, which brought good prices and augurs well for future offerings. There were hogs, goats, horses and mules.

Sponsors of the project were enthusiastic about its possibilities and the fact that success will be reflected "in more economic independence for every farm in this section of the state."

John Hines, president of the association, was flanked by Lacy Ralls, vice president, and John Wilkerson, secretary and treasurer, when the bidding was begun. A smile of success beamed from them when Dr. Paul Chapman, dean of the Georgia State College of Agriculture, principal speaker, told the audience that from the size of the crowd and the fine stock brought in "you'll just have to build a larger center."

Steers, beef cattle, purebreds, hogs, horses and mules yesterday passed through the bidding arena as the Hogansville Livestock Association opened for business. A few of the buyers and spectators are shown as one of the prize offerings takes a stance. At the right, inside the bidding stall, is Pierce Smith on whose farm the market has been established.

"Greatest Future."

"Livestock holds the greatest market possibilities of any other crop in Georgia," Dean Chapman said in pointing out that the future of cotton is increasingly uncertain "because industry is finding other commodities to replace cotton."

Dr. J. M. Sutton, state veterinarian, hailed the establishment of the center as "the best move made by this part of Georgia in the past 10 years."

"It will mean much to the future growth and development of this section of the state," he said. "I do wish, however, to call to your attention that fact that quality is paramount, and that quality cattle can be produced profitably only on cheap food—that is food grown by you. There is no better balanced farm program than a well balanced livestock program. To make it pay, one must grow into it instead of attempting to buy it to it."

Farmers and others came from Troup, Meriwether, Coweta, Heard, Carroll counties and even from eastern Alabama.

4-H Girls Present.

A group of Troup County 4-H Club girls, headed by their president, Miss Virginia Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pierce Smith, were on hand. Included in the group were Misses Mildred Ward, Helen Lindsey, Bonell Smith, Evelyn Bailey, Melba Keeble and Georgia Shackelford.

Lacy Ralls is chairman of the committee which constructed the $5,000 auction barns. Assisting him were Norwood Darden, peach grower and prominent Troup county farmer, and Pierce Smith.

Troup County Agricultural Agent John Andrews introduced speakers, and predicted a "splendid future for this most enterprising undertaking."

Future auctions will be held on the first Tuesday of each month, Hines said. "We propose to offer a superior cattle and believe we can get good prices," he added.

Total sales for the day were reported by Mr. Hines to be in excess of $5,000.

Georgia Fact-Finding Movement Is Described in Survey Graphic

Jonathan Daniels Examines Work, Concludes That Perhaps Someday a Different State Will Develop From Educational Effort of Group.

Jonathan Daniels, discovering the Georgia Fact-Finding Movement in much the same spirit as he once discovered the south, concludes that because of the work of the group, perhaps some day a legislature elected by people who know the facts might come to Atlanta to deal with state problems on a basis of facts. The results, he says, would be a different Georgia.

In an article in a recent issue of Survey Graphic, entitled "Georgia Discover Georgia," he gave a brief history of the group which met monthly in either Atlanta or Macon, read and discussed a paper by an authority on some phases of the state's economic or cultural life, and through the medium of its 16 sponsoring organizations, distributed the news, usually discouraging, to more than a quarter million Georgians.

Unwilling to detour around Tobacco Road, the Fact Finders told Georgia that she spends less on education per pupil than any state in the Union except Arkansas; that she ranks third among states in farm population; second in farm tenancy, and 39th in gross income per farm; that in one decade it is estimated that 400,000 young Georgians left the state in search of opportunity elsewhere; and that although Georgia tops the list of states for production of watermelons, peanuts, pimientos, and stands second in peaches, she seems to have made it a point to trail in nearly everything else.

That Georgians swallowed these facts, digested them, and strangely asked for more, Daniels says is because (1) "They take the facts about themselves more readily from those who are native participants in their civilization than from itinerant reformers whose intentions may be excellent but whose own sense of superiority is at least equal to their good will."

(2) "Among Georgians, the facts about Georgia will be taken with more credence and less fuss from the great conservative middle class of Georgians." It is that group (civic clubs, educational organizations, etc.) which makes up the membership of the fact finders sponsoring organizations.

"In the midst of Georgia prejudices which have sometimes and so terribly been stirred into Georgia anger, they have pointed to definite goals for Georgia. And gradually, under their pointing, thousands of Georgians are discovering that promise is not served by refusing to admit plague's existence."

The movement may be the most important happening since Sherman marched through the state, its reviewer states. And he quotes former Chancellor Philip Welton of the University System of Georgia as saying he believes that the state may even "quit her dull, half-wit ways for public intelligence and good will."

"To this hour," Daniels remarks, "no professional patriot or professional politician has attacked either the truth or the good intention of this most amazing experiment in adult education which may profoundly alter the dull, half-wit ways of a once uninformed, even uninterested democracy."

Today, Georgia's Citizen Fact Finders are annotating the controversial "Economic Problem No. 1," report of the National Emergency Council, as it relates to the state. Section by section, the famous survey has been taken and applied specifically to Georgia, using as source material their 12 reports on various aspects of Georgia life.

The national report may have even had its genesis in Georgia. Daniels theorizes, explaining that a traveler from Washington heard of the Georgia Fact Finders, satisfied his curiosity by investigation, and excitedly recommended that one of its representatives come to Washington in connection with a series of conferences for members of the staff of the Department of Agriculture.

Josephine Wilkins, president of the Georgia League of Women Voters, one of the participating organizations, went. A charming and vigorous person, Miss Wilkins, it may be presumed, spoke with clarity and optimism, and greatly interested those to whom she talked, he said.

As Daniels says, "Nobody can count all the influences that shape a President's mind. But it was little more than two months after the work of the movement, the necessity for it was discovered and disseminating about Georgia were described in Washington that the President called from the White House for similar information about the state of the south."

Material contained in the Fact Finders' report has filtered down into Georgia's submerged group, Daniels said, and there are possibilities in an informed electorate which are just beginning to be explored.

"But the understanding of the facts about our living in the south, as in Georgia, needs—and desperately—to be spread up as well as down. There is stark want at the bottom and remoteness from it at the top. It is the task of the great rank-and-file between to bring all together in the service of the south. That, I think the fact finding movement may do in Georgia, but the rich must help as well as the poor learn, if those in the middle are to succeed in their task."

First to testify were Frances McNamee, niece of her attorney, and Louis Howardhale, the attorney's office boy, who established that she had fulfilled Nevada legal requirements by living here six weeks.

When she testified she corroborated the two young witnesses. "I came here on January 20, 1933, and have been here ever since," she said. "I came here with the intention of making my home here."

She told briefly of being married to Gable on June 19, 1931, in Santa Ana, Cal., and said they had no children.

Mrs. Gable was smiling broadly when she emerged. She said she would return to her Beverly Hills home tomorrow before going to New York, where she plans to join Sam Woods, movie producer, and his wife when they return from Europe. She said she would visit relatives in Houston, Texas, later.

Gable's romance with Miss Lombard has flourished for more than two years, but both had consistently refused to discuss matrimonial plans as long as the actor was still married. Miss Lombard has been single since 1932, when she divorced William Powell in Carson City, Nev., on the grounds their difference in ages made their domestic life unhappy. She is now 29.

F.D.R. MAY RE-VISE REQUESTS FOR WPA

New Data Being Prepared by Harrington Will Govern Action.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—(P) President Roosevelt may revise downward in the next few days his recent request to congress for a $150,000,000 appropriation for relief.

He told reporters today that on the basis of new information being prepared by the Works Progress Administration, he might recommend any amount from nothing to $150,000,000 to finance relief needs through June. He will send a special message to congress on the subject, probably Monday.

The President recommended an additional $150,000,000 for relief several weeks ago.

The President said he would go over the statistics with Colonel F. C. Harrington, WPA administrator, either tomorrow or Thursday, and determine whether any more money than that already appropriated is needed.

Mr. Roosevelt cautioned reporters against speculating on the sum because he said he did not know himself. He added that newspaper stories appearing today to the effect that he would insist on the $150,000,000 figure were cockeyed, (Senator Barkley, Democrat, Kentucky, the majority leader, had said after a White House conference yesterday that Mr. Roosevelt would soon detail his reasons for asking the $150,000,000.)

PERRYMAN LITTLE TAKES OVER POST Assumes Duties as Head of Manufacturers Association.

A. Perryman Little yesterday assumed active duties as president of the Atlanta Manufacturers and Distributors Association after installation at a dinner meeting Monday night at the Ansley hotel.

Serving with him are Ben H. Bach, vice president; Horace Colingsworth Jr., second vice president; D. L. Condry, secretary, and L. J. Pirkle, treasurer. Directors of the association are Seymour S. Lavine, Warren Hall, J. R. Purcell, Sylvan Mackey, Julius Meyer, Frank Dazier, Elec Lipschutz and Abe Klein.

President Little announced the major matter under consideration by the organization was the annual fall program to be presented in connection with Fall Trade Week. Events planned include a style show, banquet, merchandise clinic and dances.

said, "Clark is working in 'Gone With the Wind,' but when he gets a few days off and I am not busy perhaps we will sneak away and have the ceremony performed."

South American Trip.

"He said he was going to South America," she said. "When he came back he said he wanted to try it alone. He said he wanted more freedom."

"After this he came to the house several times to talk to me but he never offered to return to the marital state."

A property settlement was not sought of the court, but it was known that Gable settled something over $300,000 on his wife before she came to Las Vegas six weeks ago to establish legal residence. Previously she had refused to seek a divorce, explaining to friends that Gable first must ask her to restore him his marital freedom. Two months ago he announced publicly that he was asking her for a divorce.

Permits Newsman.

Mrs. Gable, a plumpish middle-aged woman wearing a simple black dress trimmed in pink and a black Pagoda hat, was in high good humor for her court appearance. Although the public was barred, she broke precedent by agreeing to let newspapermen attend the session.

First to testify were Frances McNamee, niece of her attorney, and Louis Howardhale, the attorney's office boy, who established that she had fulfilled Nevada legal requirements by living here six weeks.

Government Representative Greeted Newlyweds on Arrival in Havana

By Sally Forth.

WHEN Dr. and Mrs. Steve Barnett stepped from the gangplank of the S. S. Florida in Havana, Cuba, for their honeymoon last week, they were greeted cordially by a representative of the Cuban government, and the lovely bride, the former Josephine Meador, was presented a bouquet of exquisite orchids with the compliments of Eusebio L. Dardet, tourist commissioner.

This gracious and charming gesture on the part of the neighboring island republic is the expression of that country's earnest desire to cement the friendly relations between two great nations. In fact, the courtesy extended the newlyweds, Dr. and Mrs. Barnett, inaugurated a delightful practice by the tourist commission of Cuba—that of greeting all bridal couples who choose Havana's entrancing atmosphere for their honeymoon. And each happy bride, as she steps upon Cuban soil, will receive a bouquet of that country's choicest blossoms to remind her that she and her bridegroom are welcome guests on the island.

Nor does the courtesy stop there. The steamers plying between Florida and Cuba have beautifully decorated staterooms which are reserved especially for bridal couples, and, in addition, they receive special attention while aboard ship. For instance, the chief steward, through devious ways, will ascertain what special dishes the newlyweds prefer and these will be served them with the steward's compliments. And, of course, their choice of a table in the dining room, a spot for a deck chair, or any other personal preference will be followed to the letter.

In fact, there are so many inducements offered to prospective brides and grooms to spend their honeymoon in romantic Havana that Sally Forth predicts an unprecedented rush for reservations on steamers bound for Cuba.

SENTIMENT will figure prominently in the christening of little Mary Helen Reese, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Reese, of Letohatchie, Ala., which will be solemnized today by Dean Raimundo de Ovies. The dean, you know, baptized the baby's mother, the former Susie Youngblood, many years ago in Sheffield, Ala.

The ceremony will be solemnized at 11:45 o'clock at the home of the baby's grandmother, Mrs. Charles V. Hohenstein, on Sixth street. Mrs. Hohenstein is also prominently identified with the Episcopal church, her father having been the late Rev. T. C. Tupper, former dean of St. Philip's cathedral.

Little Mary Helen, who is the sixteenth grandchild of Mrs. Hohenstein, will wear the exquisite christening gown made by her grandmother several years ago at the time of her brother Frank's christening.

The baby's godparents are Mr. and Mrs. Jack Savage and Mrs. Polly Woodall, her aunt.

A COVETED honor was recently conferred upon Dorothy Brumby, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brumby, who recently moved to Marietta from Franklin, La. The attractive brunette belle appeared as one of eight maids in the carnival ball at the recent Mardi Gras festival in New Orleans.

The theme of the affair was "Tulip Time in Holland," and the belles wore varicolored models, the hoopskirts of which were appliqued with tulips. Dorothy wore gold satin, and carried a bouquet of slender tulips to match her gown.

Marietta is justly proud of Dorothy's participation in the festival, for the maids may take part in the affair only at the invitation of a secret organization, and they must be of debutante age or older.

Every Acquaintance Is Important Link in Chain of Friendship

A Home of Her Own Gives Advantage to Lone Woman

By Caroline Chatfield.

Dear Miss Chatfield: My husband and I found each other sufficient and I am afraid that is the reason I have had such a hard time now. We didn't bother about people. We just lived to ourselves and then he died. I soon realized, for the first time, that we had had absolutely no social life and that I must have some or go crazy. But I find it's easier said than done. My married friends seem to think I can get along by myself and make no opportunities for me to meet men. You know how it is in a city if there's nobody to sponsor you, you don't get invited. Now what can you suggest that I do? W. M.

Answer: With luck, patience and persistence a lone woman can make a place for herself in some social scheme but she can't depend on her married friends to make the place for her and it is a great mistake for her to attach herself, barnacle-like, to her friends and their husbands. If she's too attractive the wives don't relish her and she's too dull the husbands will be bored to death with her. Though it does seem that a widow's friends should rally around her when she's coming out of mourning as they did when she went in.

A lone woman longing for friends must make a background for herself; and the most important element in it is a home, if only a tiny apartment. This gives her an indispensable advantage. First of all a sense of belonging somewhere which in turn makes her secure and contented. She can spread herself and express her taste, invite people in to small feasts (if not more than a bowl of salad and few slivers of meat) and as they accept her hospitality they return in kind.

Second, a home gives her opportunity to do what a friend of mine calls sampling; that is putting up with nine people you don't fancy with the hope that the tenth may be someone you will fancy and it's certainly true that every acquaintance is a link in a chain that may lead to a far, fair land. Who knows?

Nothing like good works to bind people together and there's always room for volunteer workers in the charitable organizations of a community. There's a huge satisfaction in doing something for the unfortunate and friendships formed in this way have a real basis for survival. The church is the door to these opportunities and a church connection is a comfort and joy to a lone woman who feels friendless—provided she'll pay and pray.

The men! Aye there's the rub! The widow's field is limited unless she's a charming eye-filler with plenty of oomph and winning ways that go with it, she's at the mercy of fate. Perhaps she can help things along by placing herself in proximity to a prospect or prospects and certainly there's no harm in her going where the game is and telling her friends that she's on the safari.

Here's a Quick Up-Lift For You When Your Face Feels All Let-Down

Richard Greene Makes Picture In London

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, March 7.—Arleen Whelan and Marjorie Weaver in a drug store, commiserating with each other on mutual career trouble. . . . Marlene Dietrich attempts to play a violin, and is stymied by her long fingernails. She retires to her boudoir and returns with the nails of the playing fingers filed right off. . . . Bob Hope tells me that he and his wife will adopt a baby from the Evanston Cradle on the way back from their vacation in England. . . . Sue Carol—remember her?—is now in the agency business. . . . Which reminds me, Priscilla Lane and sister Rosemary are the town's latest business women—the girls are investing in real estate. . . . William Collier Sr., had just finished fainting for a scene in invitation to Happiness. "You did it too quick," reprimanded Director Wesley Ruggles. "Then you'd better get an older man," snapped Collier, who is 74 years young.

Richard Greene is in a good old London fog for a sequence in the Sherlock Holmes picture. He gets well and truly lost. "What are you looking for?" yells Sidney Landfield. "Wendy Barrie?" . . . "Princess Baba" goes into the hospital tomorrow for a serious major operation. But tonight she will have a ringside seat at wrestler-husband Bob Gregory's new restaurant. "Ye Old Cheshire Cheese." Nice going, Baba. . . . Ann Sheridan, posing for some stills, tells me, "I think these strapless evening gowns are more risky than risque." . . . The Paul Munis are apart—which is real news. Bella is in New York, feasting her mind on plays, while Paul is in Arizona with her brother, Abem Finkel, planning "Beethoven," his next movie.

Claudette Colbert sits for a portrait at Metro—and looks the part. . . . W. C. Fields gets the signature of the onlooker who saw him do a hole in one at the Lakeside Golf club. "It's the first time in thirty years," Bill gloats, and almost falls off the wagon to celebrate. . . . Mervyn Le Roy has a talking desk. He just presses a button and it talks back. No, it hasn't yet learned to say, "Yes, Mr. Le Roy." . . . Mark Sandrich, who is a director, is also an epigrammatist. On the set the other day, he told me, "No man wants to get married—but no man wants to be unmarried."

You got something there, Mark. . . . John Garfield playing tennis at the Westside Club in the most abbreviated trunks of the season. . . . Groucho Marx trying to beat his son at the same game at the Beverly Hills Tennis Club—and failing very badly.

How about those emergencies when you must do something and do it quickly, to "save your face"? There are such times, you know, times when you are just left tutored out but can't afford to give way to that feeling, nor must you look the part.

My advice is to take 15 minutes out and become a new person. That's really possible, with regard to both looks and feeling. Your instrument of remodeling is a luscious pink cream which acts like 10 professional fingers on the skin. Of course you must do a thorough job of cleansing first. Then apply the cream and flop on your bed. But before you flop, arrange your pillows so that they will rest under your hips rather than your head.

With this elevation of hips, put your feet on either the head of your bed or on the back of a chair—in the fashion that you've seen men relax with feet on bannisters or on their desks. Haven't you often envied them the ease and restfulness they seem to get from such a position? Now's your chance to emulate them. After all, their object in so sitting is to relax.

And with feet higher than head, that relaxation is much greater. Try it. With your head and body thus lower than your feet your blood will naturally flow to your face, resting those muscles and bringing color—natural color—to your face. Try the position some time and look into a hand mirror at the difference in your whole expression. So much for this beauty-angle position.

During the 15 minutes you thus relax the cream will dry into a mask and, since your face is relaxed, it will be "set" in that condition of repose. Because it contains stimulating properties, this mask awakens circulation and helps to clear the skin of impurities, thus improving skin texture by contracting enlarged pores.

For a limited time, the concern which makes this very lovely cream mask is authorizing that the price be cut one-third. My advice to you would be to take advantage of this opportunity to see just what it can and will do for you. Phone me for its name, or if you do not live in the city, write me, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

Make Your Speech Vivid, Effective

Helena is always chosen for the post of honor. With her bright friendly phrases she welcomes the distinguished visitor to the club—puts him at ease, wins the admiration of fellow club members. Such simple phrases she uses too. "It was good of you to come." "We are deeply grateful to you." "You are so fitting, so useful in meeting situations like this one."

No groping for words either as she introduces the speaker. Equipped with well-turned phrases, apt word combinations, she mentions his "active understanding" of club problems, asks for his "candid criticism," offers the "eager assistance" of the members.

How it will smooth your own path in life to have such aids to your vocabulary! Easy to win new friends, keep old ones, if you know the kindly expressions that put people in pleasant mood. "A charming home," to the recent bride. "What a knack you have" to the woman who's helping you make sandwiches at the church fair. Sympathy with "I'm shocked and grieved," "I know how you feel."

When telephoning in business matters you appear sure of your self if you say, "I would like to make an appointment." "Let me speak to the adjustment manager."

In Notrump Bid Always Consider Vulnerability

By Harold Sharpsteen.

Contrary to general belief, vulnerability is always an important consideration when bidding no-trump takeouts, after an opponent has overcalled in a suit.

Free no-trump takeouts, at all levels of bidding, definitely require that opponent's suit must be stopped at least once.

Any jump no-trump response guarantees a double stopper.

Not vulnerable, third hand bids one no-trump holding 1½ plus honor tricks with as little as queen and two small or jack with four small as the stopper in opponent's suit.

ONE NOTRUMP TAKEOUT.

Should partner open the bidding with one heart, second hand overcalling one spade, third hand, not vulnerable bids one no-trump, holding:

S-A 10 2 D-K 8 6 H-7 3 C-J 10 5 3

Vulnerable, third hand should pass. Requirements for the free no-trump vulnerable are two honor tricks, distributed in three suits, including opponent's suit. Change the club jack in the above hand to a queen to qualify the holding for a vulnerable one no-trump takeout.

Had second hand overcalled two diamonds or two clubs, instead of one spade, third hand would need to bid two no-trump. Even though two no-trump, in this case, is the cheapest no-trump available, it is, nevertheless, a far stronger bid than a one no-trump takeout, requiring a minimum of 2½ honor tricks.

TWO NOTRUMP TAKEOUT.

Lacking a "fit" or mild support for partner's opening suit, bid, such as king-small or queen-jack, third hand should have opponent's overall suit stopped twice. Although the two no-trump takeout by third hand, following opponent's overall at the two level, is not forcing, it is usually as strong as a jump no-trump takeout as: one heart, one spade, two no-trump.

With partner having opened the bidding one heart, second hand overcalling two diamonds, third hand bids two no-trump, holding:

S-Q 10 7 D-K J H-K 7 C-A 7 6 2

THREE NOTRUMP TAKEOUT.

A three no-trump response if a jump bid, is made just the same, when there is an intervening bid, the three no-trump includes a sure stopper in opponent's bid suit.

A three no-trump response is a highly specialized bid showing (a) 3½ to 4 honor tricks, all suits stopped. (b) A 4-3-3-3 suit pattern.

Windsor Chair Is Really American

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

The story goes that Thomas Jefferson wrote the Declaration of Independence in a Windsor chair, and there were 14 of them on the veranda at Mount Vernon. Like a lot of the rest of us, the Windsor chair has an English name but really it's as American as Thanks-giving. For it was in the new world that the Windsor really came into its own.

That Wheel Design. Actually it was probably originated around Windsor castle in England in the reign of Queen Anne—the work of wheelwrights or turners instead of cabinet makers, hence its spoke design. But the English Windsor remained heavier, stolid sort of chair with pierced plates—something like those heavy chairs you see in country hotel lobbies. The graceful, charming Windsors, as developed in America, are slender and delicate and thoroughly delightful. Philadelphia is responsible for the first American Windsor but later most of the colonies took up the style and made their own versions.

Watch the Back. The Windsor is characteristically a chair of slender spindled back, a soft, padded seat and a high, curved directly into the seat. There are many variations, especially in the designs of the backs. There are comb backs, hoop backs, loop backs, fan backs. Seats are of solid wood or rush. Legs are nearly always turned and splayed, and decorated with rockers added. The familiar Boston rocker is an offshoot of the Windsor design. Sometimes there are writing shelves attached to the right arm. This is the type Jefferson was supposed to have used when writing the Declaration.

Most all the familiar woods have been used for Windsors at one time or another. Traditionally the seat was of pine or birch—the bent rail of beech, birch, hickory or ash; the turned legs and spindles of maple, ash, birch, oak or beech. Modern Windsors are most frequently in maple, walnut or mahogany.

Q. Where do ornamental evergreens thrive best?

My Day: Democratic Processes Represent Freedom

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

ON THE TRAIN TO NATCHEZ, MISS.—We departed last night and, as usual, there was work to be done up to the last minute. However, after dinner I took time off to see a film which is going to be shown this week in New York City for the first time. The pictures were taken over a period of a year spent in Czechoslovakia, and cover the crises of March and last September, so the film is called "The Crisis." The thing which impressed me most was the change in the faces of the people after the final decision of Munich, when the people in Prague realized that they were again a subject nation.

It is true that Czechoslovakia is made up of various racial strains, including the Sudetenland, whose people are of German birth. Very probably, representation granted to these various groups in the government was not completely equal, but judging from this picture, the government of the little republic was an enlightened one, and many social reforms had been instituted. In watching the young people at their great festival, one gets the impression of a virile people contented in their freedom. Perhaps the value of this picture for us is the mere realization of the difference which freedom, backed by a sense of security, gives in comparison with virtual dependency where security can no longer exist. Democratic processes are slow, but for us they represent freedom, and I hope we will guard them jealously.

My first lecture on this trip is in Natchez, Miss. Some weeks ago a very lovely book with beautiful illustrations came to me from the two authors, Georgie Wilson Newell and Charles Cromartie Compton. I have looked at the cover of this book every day and hoped to have time to read it and prepare myself for an intelligent appreciation of the countryside and the lovely old homes which have been preserved in Natchez and the surrounding neighborhood. I had to bring it with me, however, to read last night after I got on the train. I am certainly looking forward to a glimpse of this interesting place, even though I realize that it is too early for the gardens to be at their best.

When I entered the diner for breakfast this morning, I looked out of the window and remarked to Miss Thompson that the place we were approaching looked like Abingdon, Va., and, sure enough, it was. The place always brings back memories of my father, who spent the closing years of his life there. I have only been there once, but because of my associations I suppose certain landmarks were fixed in my mind.

Now we are in Tennessee; there are clouds overhead, with blue patches of sky showing through here and there. The waters in every little stream are swollen far beyond their normal limits and very, very muddy, but nowhere have I seen any signs of serious damage being done. Daffodils are blooming in the yards of the houses, but the trees are still bare. In this part of the country, the majority of homes look poor and many of them are mere log cabins, but I have seen one or two very prosperous looking farm houses.

Vitamin A Promotes Better Growth and Development

By Dr. William Brady.

A nice dish of dandelion greens, taken from a field where the dogs haven't beaten you to it, yields 30,000 units of vitamin A—if anybody cares for dandelion greens or for vitamin A. I'm not crazy about either, although I go for spinach, beet greens, lettuce, raw cabbage, escarole, turnip greens and watercress, not because they are all rich in vitamin A but because I like 'em.

However, you needn't eat any of these faddish just to get plenty of vitamin A, if you have fewer obsessions against such foods, for there is plenty of vitamin A in many of the everyday foods of most people. For example, Prof. Edward Mellanby's high vitamin A diet, which he recommends for multiple disseminated sclerosis, trigeminal neuralgia and migraine consists of these essentials daily: 1 to 2 pints of milk, two eggs, mammalian liver, green vegetables and cod liver oil.

Foods especially rich in vitamin A are liver, egg yolk, carrots, sweet potato, yellow cheese of any kind, cream, butter, banana, tomato or tomato juice (fresh or canned), spinach, lettuce, escarole, dandelion greens, beet greens, turnip greens, watercress, lettuce, romaine lettuce, kale, green peppers, fresh or dried yellow peaches, green peas, dried prunes, squash, parsley, chard, broccoli, dried apricots, fresh apricots, fresh milk, evaporated milk, dried milk. Nearly all foods that are naturally green or yellow contain considerable vitamin A.

How NOT to get plenty of vitamin A is a more difficult question to answer. One would have to choose a freakishly restricted diet in order to achieve a shortage of vitamin A, and A-vitaminosis, as doctors call it.

Still, we do not know as yet what particular digestive disturbance or deficiency in assimilation or in metabolism or utilization and storage of vitamin A in the body may cause A-vitaminosis or A-hypovitaminosis (if you can take it in such large chunks now) even though there may be a plentiful supply of vitamin A in the food. Observations made in schools and other institutions in this country and in England seem to show that a moderate intake of vitamin A than is provided in even a well balanced diet promotes better growth, development and immunity to dental caries or decay of teeth and to cri (common respiratory infections) in growing children.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS. Advantage of Being a Poor Risk. Doctor employed by clinic says at the clinic they reserve the injection method for hernias in persons who are poor surgical risks. So the poor chap with a small hernia and sufficient vitality gets the work (W. F. L., M.D.).

Answer—In that same clinic, where only a few years ago the big shots masterfully informed customers that the diathermy method of extirpating tonsils was "no good," they now use the method in many cases when the patients return complaining of the chunks of tonsils left after tonsillectomy. We live and learn, but slowly.

Fair Weather. The calcium-phosphorus-vitamin D you recommended has done me a world of good, during a stormy menopause. Have not had any hot flashes for over two months now, and that is certainly a blessed relief. (Mrs. B. B. A.)

Answer—I have a monograph on Menopause (change of life), containing instructions for relief of hot flashes. For copy send a three-cent-stamped envelope bearing your address. Do not send clipping of this item or loose stamps. (Copyright, 1939, for The Constitution.)

Primrose Path to Obesity Is Strewn With Carbohydrates

By Ida Jean Kain.

We see that the good Queen Elizabeth has gained 12 pounds in the last 12 months. Her friends say it's the oatakes—that Her Majesty just won't give up oatakes!

And there is a possible clue to your weight gain! What won't you give up—wheatcakes, gingerbread, cheesecake? The only trouble with liking some special food is that you like it to excess!

It so happens that the Queen is fond of hotbreads. Well, some like 'em hot and some like 'em cold, but either way, they roll up the calories. One griddle cake contains 100 calories, and who wants to stop with one? And who wants to stop with plenty of butter and, in these parts, the traditional maple syrup? And for your information, there are 100 calories in one pat of butter one-half inch thick, and the same number in one and one-half tablespoons of maple syrup.

Hard rolls and soft don't come any fewer than 100 calories per roll, and we've observed bun-munchers getting away with two rolls and one pat of butter before the soup was on.

But you can gain weight you do not want in other ways. Perhaps you particularly like the trimmings—the gravies, sauces and salad dressings—and never touch bread. Weight for weight, these foods are twice as high in calories as the starches. When you take two tablespoons of gravy and two of French dressing, where are you? About 200 calories ahead.

The primrose path to obesity is strewn with the delectable carbohydrates. You may get through the meal without breaking any of the rules for keeping slim, and spoil it all by taking a rich dessert.

On the other hand, perhaps you can blame your excess poundage on social calories rather than your daily fare. Those teas and luncheons where the hostesses try to outdo each other in the matter of food are no help to your figure. And, as for cocktails, they are notorious weight makers. You have to convert your alcohol calories into energy, and while this goes on your food calories turn into double chins. The average cocktail contains around 100 calories and a half a salted peanut furnishes enough energy to keep you going for an hour when you are just sitting and talking.

When you are trying to lose weight, something unsuspected, like salt or water, may keep you from losing it. The quantity of liquid taken with the meal should always be restricted to one glass, and salt used very sparingly.

Your food preferences are habits and may govern your weight. It is all too easy for you to overeat of your favorite food, and it takes only a little more than 100 extra calories per day to make you gain a pound a month. Reducing need not mean that all your favorite dishes are taboo, but it does mean that they are being watched.

Miss Rose Gilmer Weds Dr. Sugarman

Miss Rose Gilmer became the bride of Dr. Marvin M. Sugarman at a ceremony solemnized Sunday at the Jewish Progressive Club on Pryor street.

Rabbi Harry H. Epstein and Tobias Geffen officiated in the presence of the immediate families and a few friends, and Mendel Segal presented a program of music.

Ushers included Max Kunian and Louis Zipperman.

Miss Minnie Gilmer, maid of honor, and sister of the bride, was the only attendant. She wore a powder blue crepe dress fashioned along princess lines. Her accessories were marine blue and her shoulder bouquet was of pink and white roses.

Dr. Ramon Wender was the groom's best man.

The bride entered with her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. I. Gilmer, by whom she was given in marriage, and they were met at the altar by the groom and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Sugarman.

The bride was gown in a mauve silk dress, shirred at the bodice and waist. A small veiled mauve hat trimmed in cranberry-colored flowers and cranberry accessories completed her costume. Her shoulder bouquet was of orchids.

The bride's mother wore a model of blue lace, with navy accessories, and her corsage was of pink roses. Mrs. Sam Sugarman, mother of the groom, chose an ice-blue print, worn with navy accessories. Her flowers were pink roses.

Following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. I. Gilmer entertained the wedding guests at a dinner at the club.

Dr. and Mrs. Marvin M. Sugarman left by motor for a wedding trip to Florida, the bride traveling in a model of navy print crepe worn with full-length silver fox fur. Her accessories were navy.

Upon their return, the young couple will reside at 194 Atlanta avenue.

Out-of-town guests included Miss Rose Sugarman, of Columbus, Ohio; Miss Roslyn Sugarman, of Vanderbilt University; Leon Sugarman, of New Orleans, La.; Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Egan, of Daytona Beach, Fla.; Mr. and Mrs. L. Leventhal, of Chattanooga, Tenn.; Louis Zipperman, of Houston, Texas; and Sol West, of New York City.

Mrs. Colquitt Carter Chosen To Head Junior League

Mrs. W. Colquitt Carter was elected president of the Atlanta Junior League at the meeting held yesterday at the Piedmont Driving Club. Mrs. Carter succeeds Mrs. Joseph W. Cooper, who has guided the destiny of the league most capably during the past year.

Other officers elected to serve with Mrs. Carter include Mrs. Malon Courts, first vice president; Mrs. Fritz Orr, second vice president; Mrs. Bruce Montgomery, treasurer; Mrs. Charles Tuller, recording secretary, and Mrs. Erroll Hay, corresponding secretary.

The five members elected to the board of directors were Mrs. Edwin McCarty, Mrs. William Hamm, Mrs. John Otley Jr., Mrs. Augustus Loyless, and Mrs. Joseph Brennan. Mrs. Malon Courts was chosen as the delegate to the national conference of the Junior League to be held in Memphis, Tenn., on May 1.

Mrs. Carter has been an active and popular figure in league activities for several years. During the past year she has served as first vice president, and she has twice filled the office of second vice president under different regimes. She has also been twice a member of the board of directors, as art chairman and as historian.

She achieved great success as solicitation chairman for "store day" held during the past year. As the former Miss Marion Cobb Bryan, eldest daughter of Judge and Mrs. Shepard Bryan, Mrs. Carter attended St. Timothy's school in Baltimore, Md., and was a popular and admired belle until her marriage to Mr. Carter, prominent Atlanta attorney. She is the mother of two small daughters, Florence and Nancy Carter, and is a charming and beloved member of young matron ranks of society.

The highlight of Mrs. Cooper's regime was the establishment of an entirely new project, the speech school, which has been operated most successfully under the direction of Mrs. William Hamm. Another brilliant achievement was the highly successful "store day" held by the league last December, under her direction.

Mrs. Cooper's Report. Mrs. Cooper read the report from the February board meeting of the Association of Junior Leagues of America. It was decided that there would be no regional meetings held in 1939-40. The A. J. L. A. conference of 1940 will be held in Seattle, Wash.

The slate of new officers to be elected at the national conference to be held in Memphis in May includes: Treasurer, Mrs. Bradnor Lee, of Los Angeles, and for vice president, Mrs. H. W. Holland Jr., of St. Petersburg. Mrs. Holland is the present director of Region V, of which the Atlanta league is a member. She will visit this league early in April.

A letter was read from the Georgia Association of Workers for the Blind asking co-operation in buying hand towels made by blind women. A request was made for 50 volunteers to act as hostesses, at the Atlanta homes and gardens when the Georgia Garden pilgrimage will be in Atlanta April 1, 2 and 3.

The league will have a broadcast from station WAGA on March 17 at 4:45 o'clock. This will be one of a program series sponsored by the Federation of Women's Clubs. The program will be "League Snapshots" and will portray in dramatic form some of the work of the Atlanta league.

Mrs. Edwin McCarty, welfare chairman, announced that a new project had been undertaken. The league will co-operate with the city health department in compiling records on diphtheria. Three girls are already at work under Dr. Waggoner and Mrs. McCarty requested six more volunteers. Births will be recorded and a serious effort made to immunize all babies before nine months of age.

The president welcomed as transfers Mrs. Joseph High Williams from Charleston, and Mrs. Albert M. Littleton from St. Louis. Mrs. Bonneau Ansley, the city editor, announced that the March issue of the Junior League magazine contains a book review of "The Education of an American" by Mark Sullivan, written by Mrs. Lloyd Hatcher, of the Atlanta league. In a series of activity pictures, Atlanta is well represented, a picture of the marionettes, one at Eggleston hospital, one of the sewing group and two pictures of the speech clinic being included.

Mrs. John K. Otley Jr. was awarded the sweepstakes prize in the arts and crafts exhibit, held at the Driving Club preceding the meeting, for her oil painting, the study of a boy's head. The judges for the exhibit included Mrs. Harold Bush-Brown, in the fine arts class, and Mrs. Leslie Blair, of Marietta, in the handicraft display.

The first prize in the fine arts class went to Mrs. Charles Nunnally for an oil painting entitled "Lady in Red"; the second prize to Mrs. Preston Stevens for a painting of a nude; third prize to Mrs. Jack Thiesen for a painting of white iris. Mrs. Henry Tompkins received honorable mention in this class for a nude; Mrs. John Otley Jr. for her "Head of a Boy" and Mrs. Trimble Johnson for her still-life painting of a chair.

In the sculpture class, first prize was awarded to Miss Louise Cramer for her carved wood squirrels to be used as driveway markers. Mrs. W. D. Ellis III was the winner in the photography class with two enlargements, entitled "Let Me In" and "Christmas Morning."

In the handicraft display, Mrs. Richard Garlington won first prize in the needlework class for a carriage robe and pillow; second prize went to Mrs. Frank Player for her chistening robe and third prize was awarded Mrs. William Sibley for an embroidered sweater. In the same display, Miss Bright Bickstaff was judged winner of the handwoven articles for her scarf.

His hobby collection Mrs. Ewell Gay's array of cows won the first award because of its great originality; second prize went to Mrs. Lon Grove's superb collection of figurines; and third to Mrs. William Conrad's doll tea set. In the scrapbook class, Mrs. Eugene Hamington was the winner with her book of wild flowers.

In the children's handiwork class, first award was given to Matilda Martin, age 12, for her miniature doll hats; John Bickstaff, age 14, received second prize for his work in silver, and Charles Rawson, age 11, received the third prize for his taxidermy, a squirrel on a branch.

Miss Shirley Weds Julius E. Morris Jr.

ROYSTON, Ga., March 7.—Wide interest centers in the announcement made today by Mrs. Ross Shirley of the marriage of her daughter, Sarah Louise, to Julius Emory Morris Jr. The ceremony was performed recently in the presence of members of the family and a few close friends.

Miss Ross Shirley was her sister's maid of honor and only attendant and Gilmer Morris acted as his brother's best man.

The bride was gown in a suit of navy wool worn with a white blouse and navy accessories. A shoulder bouquet of Talisman roses completed her costume.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Rosa Stevenson Shirley and the late James Presley Shirley. Her maternal grandparents are the late Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Stevenson.

Mr. Morris is the son of Julius E. Morris and Mrs. Annie Gilmer Morris. He is a graduate of Tech High school and he also attended the University of Georgia. He is the brother of Billy and Gilmer Morris. His paternal grandparents are the late Mr. and Mrs. Emory Morris, of Bartow county. His maternal grandparents were the late Dr. and Mrs. John Tyler Gilmer.

Les Burge Continues Hard Hitting; Fielding of Bunts Stressed

All in the GAME

by Jack Troy

Atlanta has had champions in golf, tennis, baseball, football, basketball, field trials, track, boxing and in almost any other sport one might mention.

The latest champion hardly is associated with an inland town, but none the less Claude Smith, of the Atlanta Motor Boat Club, has just won the Sir Thomas Lipton trophy in Florida.

And Sunday Atlantans who chance to drive out to Lakewood will see the greatest program of outboard motorboat races ever held in the state.

Claude Smith will compete in a crack field that will include Tommy Cooper, who holds several world's records. Cooper, of Kansas City, Mo., recently broke a world's speed record in Clearwater, Fla.

D. B. Dukehart, secretary of the Atlanta club, advises there will be a dinner in honor of the visiting drivers Saturday night at the Piedmont hotel.

Mike Benton, president of the Southeastern Fair Association, will make a talk, as will Tommy Cooper.

The Atlanta Motor Boat Club has gone a long way in putting Atlanta on the map in outboard racing and promises a thrilling program on Sunday.

As a spectacle, outboard racing is a great sport. The small boats often go as fast as 50 miles per hour and there is a real element of danger involved.

Drivers fight for advantage on the turns just as auto race drivers, and they don't always bother to cut down much on their speed. Hence, spills are not infrequent.

The daring of the drivers will intrigue onlookers. And, since top-notch outboard racing is so seldom seen in Georgia, it might interest a lot of folks to take in the Lakewood program Sunday.

"SHARP CURVE AHEAD."

It's funny how one thing leads to another sometimes. First of all, there was the story about the Detroit Tigers engaging three trainers. And right on the heels of the announcement, as it were, came the news that Tiger pitchers, after less than a week of work, were ordered to start throwing curves.

There seems to be method in the Tigers' madness in thus casting aside one of the old "don'ts" of the game. They have three trainers.

And yet sore arms may not develop out of Del Baker's plan. Funny no one ever thought of it before. I guess it's because, like so many other things in baseball, curving a ball only after two or three weeks of work has been the accepted thing to do.

They're pretty slow to change accepted things, the managers are.

Nothing startling has developed in the way of limp arms, however, and this doesn't seem strange either because of Del Baker's explanation.

"Few pitchers ever throw a curve before they've been in training two or three weeks. I've thought for some time that pitchers were making a mistake in throwing only fast balls in the early stages of training because their muscles get in a groove and then, when they start curving the ball, they come up with sore arms," Baker said.

It sounds reasonable enough and may change the plan of training for pitchers in many camps by the time another training season comes along.

I don't know that it would be a good thing for Manager Paul Richards to try because of the unusual number of young pitchers on the roster.

They might throw their arms away. It might be best to keep them throwing straight ones for some time before ordering them to "pull the string."

Young pitchers are going to slip in curve balls, anyway, and it will save wear and tear on arms in the Cracker camp to keep the "no curves" sign up for a while.

OPTIMISTS RIDE AGAIN.

Last year the Atlanta Optimist Club gave a minstrel and from the proceeds was enabled to send 500 underprivileged boys to Camp Rutledge for a week of fun and health.

There will be another minstrel on March 21 at the city auditorium, sponsored by the club, and the goal this year is 1,000 boys.

The Optimists are doing a great work among underprivileged children and are not asking anyone to give them anything. Their minstrel is to be a performance of professional actors such as made Al G. Fields famous, and the price of admission is only $1.

Entire proceeds go into a fund which is used for camp rental and all expenses of the boys. A fund of $5,000 is required to take care of everything.

Every cent of the expenses has been underwritten by members of the Optimist Club, so every dollar raised by the public sale of tickets will be used in actually sending boys to the government-owned camp.

As said, the Optimists are not asking for donations. They believe their minstrel will stand on its merits. Those who saw the last one agree that it will. And so

KIRBY WINS, 3-2; TO MEET MILEY IN TODAY'S PLAY

Patty Berg Leads Women Into Quarter-Finals at Belleair.

BELLEAIR, Fla., March 7.—(P) Patty Berg, national women's golf champion from Minneapolis who won medalist honors yesterday by shooting a 76 for a new course record, paced the field in the annual Belleair women's golf tournament through the first round of match play today by defeating Mrs. Hazel Martelle, Tampa, 7 and 5.

Miss Berg shot the outgoing nine in 37, one over men's par, and was only three, over men's par through the 13 holes of the match.

Other results: Miss Laddie Irwin, Montclair, N. J., defeated Mrs. Mark McGarry, St. Petersburg, Fla., one up.

Miss Dorothy Kirby, Atlanta, defeated Miss Mary Agnes Wall, Menominee, Mich., 3 and 2.

Miss Marion Miley, Lexington, Ky., the defending champion who won from Miss Berg in the finals last year, defeated Mrs. Fred Nolan, Belleair, 4 and 3.

Miss Jean Bauer, Providence, R. I., defeated Miss Jane Cothran, Greenville, S. C., 6 and 5.

Miss Helen Detweiler, Washington, D. C., defeated Miss Frances Hadfield, Milwaukee, and St. Petersburg, 4 and 3.

Mrs. Glenna Collet Vare, six-times former national women's golf champion from Philadelphia, defeated Miss Jean Kyer, Ann Arbor, Mich., 2 and 1.

Miss Betty Myers, Clearwater, Fla., defeated Miss Ada McKenzie, Toronto, 2 and 1.

Mrs. Vare shot the 17 holes of her match in 72 strokes.

Kirby Says Her Match Was Funny

Dot Rallied To Win; To Seek Revenge Against Miley.

By DOROTHY KIRBY. BELLEAIR COUNTRY CLUB, March 7.—Everything today turned out just about the way that was expected I think as all of the favorites came through. There will be quite a few good matches tomorrow. One, for instance, when Helen Detweiler meets Jean Bauer.

Patty Berg plays Laddie Irwin. It looks as though Laddie and Pat meet in just about every tournament. Laddie had a hard time of it today playing Mrs. Mark McGarry. The match went to the 18th hole where Laddie won after a hard battle.

I believe that I had the funniest match of the day. However, at the time, it was anything but funny. The match started out by my winning the first hole and then we halved the second. I lost the third, lost the fourth and also lost the fifth. Well, by this time, things were beginning to look very much on the back side.

BIRDIE ON NO. 6. I had a birdie on the 6th and won that hole by one stroke. Won the 7th and halved the eighth and ninth to be all square at the end of the first nine. I was out in 40 and my opponent, Miss Wall, was about one or two strokes better.

I got in the lead on the tenth and held on for everything I was worth until finally I won the 13th and 14th and won out on the 16th green. I have never seen such beautiful chipping and putting as Miss Wall did. Last night some of us were talking about her game and Patty remarked that she certainly had fine hand action on all of her shots. I agree with her. She hits a very long ball, but is a trifle wild at times. This is about the only tournament that she plays in; if she entered some of the other ones it would be hard on quite a few of us.

Tomorrow, Marion Miley and I meet again. It seems to happen that way every time.

The last time we played was at the national and she beat me on the 19th hole. We always have a good battle of it. Marion played nice golf today to beat Mrs. Nolan by a good margin.

TREASURE HUNT. After all of the golf this morning we took the afternoon off and went to a treasure hunt over on the beach. It seems that they have it every year. Kathryn McCloskey found the treasure. I came close, but that doesn't count. It was a lot of 'un riding over on the boat and going wading, etc.

Gene Sarazen, one of the pros here at the present, was out practicing late this afternoon and I went over to watch him hit a few. He certainly gets into the ball. However, he said that he had been playing pretty badly but thought that he had found the trouble and it was in his grip. He uses the interlocking grip.

Gene has moved his left hand away over on the club so that he can hit against it. His shots looked perfect to me.

Well, tomorrow, I hope to get revenge for the beating Marion gave me last year, but my hands will really be full.

JONES AND YATES HONORED BY ATLANTA PUBLIX GOLFERS

GEORGIA SETTER FINDS 7 COVEYS

The Cavalier, Owned by Cartersville Man, Contender in National.

GRAND JUNCTION, Tenn., March 7.—(UP)—Judges of the forty-fourth national field trials tonight called back two bird dogs for second runs after the last two of 28 entries had finished their heats.

Sports Peerless Pride, black and white setter owned by L. F. Bobbitt, Winston-Salem, N. C., and Norias Airflow, white and lemon pointer bitch owned by W. C. Teagle, New York, will run tomorrow morning.

Choice of these two dogs for another run did not mean they were the only contenders for the $1,500 first prize. The judges believed they had not had fair trials on their first runs because of adverse weather.

The Cavalier, setter owned by W. H. McNaughton, Cartersville, Ga., found seven coveys and a single this afternoon. It was a record for the meet. The dog became a contender for the title—along with Lady Norias, Sports Peerless Pride, Navasota Shoals Jake, Dawns Highland Bill, Uncas Flying Devil and Norias Airflow.

POSITION PERPLEXES MAULDIN

Marshall Mauldin, native Atlantan who formerly played outfield for the Crackers, is puzzled over position this year. He is figuratively back of the eight-ball trying to decide whether to retain his post in the outfield or try to hold down third base this season. Mauldin can play both infield and outfield skillfully. At present in the Crackers' training camp Manager Richards has Mauldin doing third base chores.

200 Golfers Attend Jones, Yates Dinner

Great Program Enjoyed at Atlanta Athletic Club; Bob, Charlie Encourage Public Links.

By JACK TROY.

More than 200 golfers, members of private clubs and public links, took part in a testimonial dinner for Bob Jones and Charlie Yates last night at the Athletic Club.

The jovial jamboree produced a couple of oratorical nifties thought up on the spur of the moment.

Mayor Hartsfield started the ball rolling. Pointing out that he had seen all the Bob Jones golfing shorts, he said he understood the great Atlanta golfer was preparing a sequel entitled, "How To Pay Your Income Tax."

The banquet proceeded and the floor show occupied complete attention. There was a roller skating act—a very good one, too—and at the conclusion, guests were encouraged to take a spin with the two very fine male performers.

YATES WAS GAME.

No one responded, at first, and so they called for Charlie Yates. Charlie was game. Stripping off his coat, he took a seat on the boys' arms and they whirled him around.

Several friends helped Charlie off the floor at the end of the dizzy spin.

After then Ralph McGill, executive editor of The Constitution,

Yates promptly apologized for the reticence of Mayor Hartsfield to take a ride by saying, "It would have been embarrassing because it exceeded the speed limit."

In introducing Jones, McGill came directly to the point. He said that in England it is customary to say "Gentlemen, the King." And that in the United States the custom is to say "Gentlemen, the President." So McGill, yielding the floor to Jones, said, "Gentlemen, Bobby Jones."

CASEY AT BAT.

It was quite a party and was enlivened more than somewhat by a rendition of "Casey at the Bat" in duet. Morgan Blake, toastmaster, and Oscar Coe collaborated. They were good.

Both Jones and Yates encouraged public links golfers to push their organization and offered their co-operation. George Clayton, president of the Atlanta Public Links Golf Association, jamboree sponsors, welcomed the guests and also took a ride with the whirling dervishes of the skates.

Miss Eulene Holmes was thanked most heartily for donating such an excellent floor show. Oscar Coe told several additional stories, and the jamboree ended with the showing of golf shorts, the first on how not to play golf and the others made by Bob Jones.

CHARLIE SINGS.

The first public testimonial for the great golfing duet of Jones and Yates was highly successful. Yates further endeared himself to his public by singing a "Wee Deoch 'n Doris" and a song about Pine Valley, the world's hardest course, which was a parody on "Trees."

Yates also made one pertinent statement about Jones, pointing out that it "is 100 per cent truth." He said, "I have played enough golf now, and have had my ears pinned back enough, to know just how impossible it is to do what Bob Jones did."

Club presidents at the jamboree included P. B. McCarthy, John White; Al Fouache, James Key; Gerard Allen, Black Rock; Spain Davis, Candler Park; and Verne Murrah, Bobby Jones.

Officers of the Public Links Golf Association are Clayton, president; Gerard Allen and Verne Murrah, vice presidents; J. B. Leon, secretary, and P. B. McCarthy, treasurer.

WARLAINE WINS.

NEW YORK, March 7.—(P)—Warlane, Weston Adams' speedy son of Man o' War, which always runs well at Tropical park, won the Coconut Grove purse at the Coral Gables track in hollow fashion today although nearly half the bettors expected Short Distance to come home under Don Meade's guidance.

CHARLIE FULTON, UNION BAG STAR, TO BE TRIED OUT

Night Rain Makes Diamond Heavy; Only Six Absent.

By ROY WHITE.

SAVANNAH, Ga., March 7.—Charlie Fulton, a promising young outfielder with the Union Bag Company baseball team of Savannah last year, joined the Crackers' spring training drills this morning and went through a three-hour workout—the second of the year.

Fulton has not signed a contract and will be given a thorough trial by Manager Paul Richards.

Don Leveen, one of the three southpaws scheduled to participate in the spring work, wired President Earl Mann that he will not report this spring. Leveen is working at Barnesville, Ga., and rather than give up an all-year job for a tryout, he decided to work another year before lining up with professional baseball. He will continue to play semi-pro baseball in the summer. He was not signed to a contract and was not figured one of the pitchers to be retained on the staff, so it was not a casualty.

STEADY DOWNPOUR. A steady downpour last night left the municipal stadium infield a bit heavy, so Manager Richards discarded all plans for an infield workout and continued to stress fielding infield bunts on the grass. Lester Burge, the big Ashboro, N. C. rookie; Russ Peters, James Francoline and Marshall Mauldin moved into the spotlight Tuesday with some fine hitting.

Burge in particular was outstanding. He drove three wallopers over the light poles in right center for the longest hits of the day. They would easily have been over the left field wall.

RICHARDS IMPRESSED. Manager Richards was particularly impressed with Burge's hitting. "He has a lot of power, a fine throwing arm and takes a healthy cut with every swing. A continuation of that brand of ball will certainly make it hard to keep him off the squad," Richards said.

Francoline, the New York rookie trying for third base, hit long drives to left, center and right, on each trip to the plate. He has the most powerful forearms of any player on the squad, big, broad shoulders and certainly puts the hickory against a baseball. He was the most diversified hitter on the squad today.

PETERS IMPROVES. Peters also is improving at the plate and hit a couple against the left field scoreboard.

Alf Anderson was given some lessons in fielding hard hit balls straight in front of him. It's the most difficult of all ground balls to handle and he improved steadily.

The pitchers were given a bit more leeway today and are beginning to cut 'em loose.

Robert Chipman, the southpaw from Louisiana; Emile Lockbaum, and Winslow Stroupe, the 16-year-old North Carolina boy, looked particularly good.

One of the rookies was pitching to Manager Richards, when one of the squad yelled, "Hey, kid, the manager is hitting." He's just another batter at that plate, when I am pitching," the rookie yelled back.

34TH WITHOUT RAIN. Today's practice marked the 34th in succession the Crackers have enjoyed at Savannah without rain interference, though the heavy downpour last night caused a postponement of today's infield drill.

President Earl Mann and Manager Richards are keeping their fingers crossed.

The squad still has six missing members, but since this week is supposed to be devoted entirely to pitchers and catchers, there is no immediate concern over their not reporting.

Georgia Football Squad Ends Spring Practice Tomorrow

WALLACE BUTTS CALLS FORDHAM MOST IMPROVED

New Bulldog Mentor Praises Charges for Their Hard Work.

By F. M. WILLIAMS.
ATHENS, Ga., March 7.—Six weeks of spring football training during which emphasis has been laid on fundamentals and down right hard work, come to a close Thursday afternoon for Georgia's 1939 gridiron hopefuls.

Discussing developments during the past month and a half Wallace Butts, beginning his first year as a head coach in college football, declared today if Georgia falls in its campaign next fall it won't be because his boys don't like to work.

HARD WORKERS.
"We've got one of the hardest working squads I ever set my eyes on but as a whole the material is below the standard of other southern colleges," he declared.

"But as long as they continue to show me they like to work and as long as they take criticism in the manner they have this spring I'm well satisfied."

"We're gonna lose ball games next year, a good many of them, but with the fight and spirit our boys have had this spring there won't be a team on the schedule who won't know they've been in a ball game when that final whistle blows," he continued.

During spring work Coach Butts has practiced his squad long and hard on football fundamentals, sending the boys through hour after hour of work on the tackling dummy, the blocking

Cager Sets Record; 477 Points in Year

KINGSTON, R. I., March 7.—(AP)—Chet Jaworski, star center of the Rhode Island State basketball team, broke the one-year scoring record established by Hank Luisetti while at Stanford University when he caged 14 points tonight as the Rams bowed to the Worcester Tech basketballers, 64 to 61.

His evening's work lifted Jaworski's total to 477. Luisetti's record was 465.

machine and learning the art of handling the ball behind the line of scrimmage to shield it as well as possible from the defending team.

BAD WEATHER.
"We haven't been able to work as much as I would like to on passing and punting due to cold weather and rains and injuries to a couple of key linemen have hindered our rough work considerably," he said.

Winston Hodgson, regular left guard last season, and Winfred Goodman, up from the freshman ranks and slated to understudy Hodgson this fall, have been unable to work at all this spring due to knee injuries.

Goodman will undergo an operation in Atlanta during spring holidays two weeks away in an effort to get his leg in shape for the '39 grind. Bob Salisbury, regular blocking back last fall, has been unable to practice due to classes that conflict.

WITT HURT.
Tommy Witt, brilliant center on last year's freshman team, was ordered to turn in his uniform for the last three weeks of spring drills because of an injury that coaches are taking no chances of being aggravated before the season opens.

Turning to the boys who have worked the entire period, Coach Butts declared Jimmy Fordham had shown the most improvement of any man on the team.

"I believe he's just now rounding into a great back, and while I don't want to put him on a spot, I believe he'll be one of the best in the south next year. He is running much harder and blocking better every day and his defensive play is terrific."

All in all, he believes, the drills have been very profitable to both players and the coaches.

President Ought To Throw Out First Ball

Net Ace Can't See Club Even Through Rose Colored Glasses

(Editor's Note: The roving reporter yesterday found opinion sharply divided on the Crackers. One noted athlete, long an enthusiastic Cracker follower, couldn't see them even after slipping on rose-colored glasses.)

By JACK TROY.

"I have on a pair of rose-colored glasses," Betsy Grant, noted tennis star and long an enthusiastic follower of the Atlanta Crackers, said yesterday. "But I still can't see them for first place. Maybe first division, but I am not too sure about that."

"First of all," Grant continued, "they don't have the punch. The pitching staff is going to be below par. They're not set at third base to start.

RACHAEL LANE

"I can think of other reasons, but these are enough. I'm hoping for the best because Paul Richards is a swell young manager."

Over at the United States Forest Service in the Glenn building, Rachael Lane, librarian, took a different stand.

"I think they're very good and I want to thank President Earl Mann for wanting to have three ladies' nights instead of two."

"Another thing, I think they ought to have the President of the United States down here to throw out the first ball on opening day. After all, he does it in Washington and they have a great crowd."

"I am not going to worry about what the Crackers may lack. Paul Richards is a great manager and he'll work that out satisfactorily," Miss Lane concluded.

P. W. Warren, who works in the engineering division of the forest service, is a most ardent fan. He missed few games last year.

"When I think of what the young pitchers might not do, I recall that Johnston pitched one and two-hit games last year. The young pitchers will have their days."

"As I see it the club will have a strong defense and a weak offense. The pitching will be in and out. But I still think the Crackers will be good for the first division."

Laura Duncan, who works in the operations division of the Forest Service, sees a need for pitchers and thinks the loss of Chattanooga will hurt attendance.

"Success of the club will depend on Manager Richards. If the material is really good, he'll get the most out of it."

REVOLTA, PICARD ARE BEATEN, 1 UP

CORAL GABLES, Fla., March 7.—(AP)—Sam Snead and Ralph Guldahl marched into the finals of the $5,000 international four-ball golf tournament today by whipping Lawson Little and Tony Manero, 1 up, in 36 holes. Snead and Guldahl clinched matters on the 35th where Little hit a trap and Manero the bank of a canal to take bogeys.

Horton Smith and Paul Runyan also reached the finals as they turned back Johnny Revolta and Henry Picard, three-time winners of the tournament, 1 up.

League closed its register with eight teams. Diamond selections were also made. The schedule will open April 8 with a 21-game schedule planned. Another meeting will be held next Monday night.

Nap Rucker Is Center Of Attraction at Camp

Young Pitchers Flock to Former National League Star; Nap Throws a Few.

By ROY WHITE.
SAVANNAH, Ga., March 7.—Nap Rucker, famous National league southpaw, is the center of attraction at the Crackers' 1939 training camp.

An abundance of pitching talent, most of which is untried in first company, and the extreme youth of most of the prospective hurlers have made Nap more sought after than ever before.

In the first two days practice Rucker has been called from one side of the municipal stadium to give advice to small groups of Cracker pitchers.

Volley Ball Tourney Scheduled Saturday

The state Y. M. C. A. volleyball tournament will be held at the Central "Y" Saturday. Macon, Augusta, Columbus and Atlanta are certain entries with Albany, Savannah and Athens probable entries.

BLICK AND DODD ENTER TOURNEY

Bobby Dodd, Georgia Tech backfield coach, and John S. Blick, bowling alley operator, will team together in the seventh annual staging of The Atlanta Constitution "St. Patrick's Day" doubles bowling tournament that will be rolled on March 18. A field of more than 250 bowlers will be rolling in pairs in the event.

Coach Dodd and Colonel Blick plan to practice several afternoons of this week and next week preparatory to the bowling of their games in the pin meet.

Eleven other pairs of bowlers added their names to the entry list Tuesday, with the number of names now on file boosted up to 54 pairs of men and women.

VETERAN REESE SIGNS CONTRACT

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 7.—(AP)—Andy Reese, the Memphis "Chicks" "ageless" first sacker, visited Russwood park unexpectedly today and signed his 1939 contract.

Earlier, Reese said from his Tupelo, Miss., home, he would not come to terms "until I get what I'm asking."

The veteran player, who ripped off a .335 batting average last year, will be starting his tenth season with the Chicks. He will report to the Deland, Fla., training camp March 18.

Clyde Lawson Wins Lions' Cub Tourney

Clyde Lawson was crowned golf champion of the Lions Club of Atlanta yesterday when he defeated R. L. "Molly" Williamson, 6 and 5, in the finals of the Lions annual elimination golf tournament at Bobby Jones golf course.

Lawson was presented with a handsome trophy at the meeting of the club yesterday, and Williamson received eight new golf balls for second prize.

Roy Harwell and John Hill have reached the finals in the consolation round, the winner to receive a small trophy and second-place position to receive four new golf balls.

Thirty-two players participated in the tourney.

S. and N. Club Wins 5th Straight Game

The S. and N. Club basketball team won its fifth straight victory of the season yesterday, defeating the Boys' Club, 33 to 10, at the Boys' Club.

THEY WAGED A GOOD FIGHT.

Georgia sportsmen waged a good fight to get the Game and Fish Department out of politics and under a commission form of management, but the cause apparently was lost when a bill covered the entire natural resources division.

Georgia sportsmen were interested only in game and fish. Admittedly the other branches were doing all right.

They bit off more than they could chew, to use a quaint expression, and now the whole thing is doomed to fail. It might have been a different story had they stuck only to the Game and Fish Department.

TARZAN AND THE FIRES OF TOHR No. 9

Major Burton told Tarzan and D'Arnot that he was willing to abandon his search for the mysterious City of Tohr if he could find his way to safety. He was concerned especially about Janette. Tarzan nodded. "A beautiful girl is a magnet for many jungle dangers."

Since Tarzan and D'Arnot were bound for a native village three days away, they offered to take the travelers with them. There they would find guides to lead them to an outpost of civilization. The Major's words of thanks were interrupted by a cry in the forest.

Janette shivered. "There it is again—that same cry—the cry we heard before I saw that horrible face—but now it's closer!" D'Arnot turned to Tarzan. "What is it?" he asked. He was confident that no sound in the vast jungle was a mystery to the ape-man.

"I have never heard it before," Tarzan answered gravely. Suddenly Dr. Wong's usually calm face was galvanized with astonishment. "Behold you, Tarzan," he whispered softly. Then Janette screamed. "That face! There it is again!" But this time it did not vanish.

Renewal of Charter.

GEORGIA—FULTON COUNTY.
TO THE SUPERIOR COURT OF SAID STATE AND COUNTY:
The petition of THE CONSTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY, respectfully shows:

1. That petitioner was duly incorporated by charter of this honorable court on the 13th day of November, 1899, for a period of 20 years under the name and style of "The Constitution Publishing Company."

2. That by order of Fulton Superior Court dated the 27th day of February, 1920, the said charter was renewed; and additional powers were granted.

3. That by order of Fulton Superior Court dated the 8th day of May, 1936, the said charter was amended, and additional powers were granted.

4. Petitioner's charter as renewed will expire on the 13th day of November, 1939.

5. Petitioner desires to renew its charter under the terms of the Corporation Act of 1928 of the Legislature of the State of Georgia, for a period of 20 years of the date of the order renewing the same, and with all rights, powers and privileges granted to corporations under said act as well as with all rights, powers and privileges granted to the Constitution Publishing Company under its original charter and all amendments thereof, together with all powers and privileges now granted similar corporations by the laws of the State of Georgia.

HOWELL & POST, Attorneys for Petitioner.
EXHIBIT A.
RESOLVED: That the stockholders of THE CONSTITUTION PUBLISHING COMPANY do hereby authorize and direct that Howell & Post, the attorneys for the corporation, apply for a renewal of the present charter of the corporation, under the terms of the Corporation Act of 1928 of the Legislature of the State of Georgia, for a period of 20 years of the date of the order renewing the same; and to these ends the officers of the corporation are authorized and directed to prepare and execute said application for amendment and renewal of the said charter.

1. A. KAISER, Secretary of The Constitution Publishing Company, do hereby certify that the above and foregoing resolution is a true and correct copy of a resolution which was unanimously adopted at a regular meeting of the stockholders of the corporation held in the office of the corporation at Atlanta, Georgia, on February 8th, 1939, at which time 88% of the outstanding stock of the corporation was represented and voted.

This 8th day of February, 1939.
(Signed) A. J. KAISER, Secretary.
(CORPORATE SEAL)
FULTON COUNTY, GEORGIA.

Personally before me, the undersigned authority comes H. H. TROTTE, who, being duly sworn, says on oath that he is Vice-President of The Constitution Publishing Company; that he is familiar with the facts; and that the allegations of the above and foregoing petition are true.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, this 20th day of February, 1939.
(Seal)
Notary Public, Georgia State at Large.
ORDER.

The above petition and considered. Same is hereby sanctioned and ordered filed. It appearing to the court that all requirements of the Corporation Act of 1928 have been complied with and it appearing that said renewal of the charter has been authorized by the unanimous vote of the holders of 88% of all of the capital stock of said corporation, and adjudged that the said application is hereby granted as prayed.

The Constitution Publishing Company is hereby renewed for an additional period of 20 years from the date; with all the rights, powers and privileges granted to corporations under said charter and all amendments and amendments thereto, together with all the rights, powers and privileges now granted to similar corporations by the Corporation Act of 1928 and by the other laws of the State of Georgia.

This 20th day of February, 1939.

HITLER FAVORITE DANCES FOR NAZIS

Pittsburgh Girl Appears at Goebbels' Fete.

BERLIN, March 7.—(AP)—Young curly-haired Miriam Verne, Pittsburgh dancer, performed tonight before Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels and 31 sub-chiefs from throughout the country, making her second appearance within four days before a select Nazi audience.

Miss Verne did her act along with other entertainers after her regular performance in a local theater. She danced in Prince Leopold palace, where Goebbels' offices are situated.

The occasion was entertainment after an annual dinner Goebbels gives for the heads of the 31 propaganda ministry sub-offices throughout the country.

Prince Leopold palace is opposite the chancellery, where Miss Verne appeared Saturday night in a solo performance before Chancellor Adolf Hitler and his guests.

Marriage Is Revealed

Reveals Elopement to Mexico Last Summer Under Barrage of Questions.

NEWARK, N. J., March 7.—(UP)—Dick Merrill, trans-Atlantic flyer and airlines pilot, admitted tonight that he and Toby Wing, blond movie actress, were married in Mexico last summer.

"Sure we're married," Merrill said after reporters persistently questioned him at Newark airport. "We were married last summer. We took a trip to Mexico and got married."

At first he displayed irritation when questioned. "Why can't I be left alone?" he said. "This is my own affair."

SIX GET REPRIEVES—THREE ARE DISGUSTED
COLUMBIA, S. C., March 7.—(UP)—Six men sentenced to die for the slaying of a prison guard were told of their two weeks' reprieve granted by Governor Burnett Maybank late today.

Superintendent Wilson, of the state prison, notified the men they had at least two weeks longer to live.

Roy Suttles, 30, glanced at the paper of notification, threw it down and exclaimed, "Why don't people let us alone? Don't want any reprieve. Why don't they get it over with?" Two others agreed with Suttles and the other three men took the information without comment.

Wanted To See Stump Blown Up—But Sees Stars

GLASGOW, Ky., March 7.—(AP) Curiosity almost cost the life of Dewey Duncan, 32.

He was one of a group of workmen who set a charge of dynamite under a tree stump, lighted a fuse and scurried for shelter in a nearby store. Dewey stuck his head around a door to see the explosion and was struck in the face by a piece of the stump. He was taken to a hospital.

HIGH COURT GETS STEINER APPEAL

Decision Is Expected in Four or Five Months.

A decision on the Steiner cancer hospital fight is expected from the Georgia supreme court in four or five months, attorneys said yesterday as the case went to the high court.

Judge Virlyn B. Moore yesterday signed a bill of exceptions for a group of Atlanta physicians who were unsuccessful in Fulton superior court in having a proposed enlargement of the hospital declared illegal.

Judge Moore's ruling will hold the proposed structure in abeyance until the supreme court has acted.

Honey is used in manufacture of gold bars, shaving cream, tooth paste and tobacco.
